Four departments are currently preparing a list of people who will be affected by the government furloughs, and the mayors' offices will most likely see the most number of layoffs, according to Esther Fleming, the governor's special assistant for administration.

The four departments preparing furlough and non-renewal letters are the Department of Community and Cultural Affairs, the Department of Public Works, the Department of Land and Natural Resources, and the Office of the Governor, Fleming said yesterday. She has given the department heads until Monday to prepare the letters.

Public officials are not entitled to qualified immunity if there is a finding that they have willfully and knowingly violated the law, according to Rep. Tina Sablan.

Sablan said public officials are not covered by such immunity if they demonstrate plain incompetence in the conduct of their duties.

The lawmaker expressed her position on the immunity issue in her response to the motion to dismiss the lawsuit filed by Gov. Benigno R. Fitial, acting Attorney General Gregory Baka, and Finance Secretary Eloy S. Inos.

IF FOUND OPERATING WITHOUT TWIC CARD AFTER APRIL 15

USCG: Mariners, vessel owners 'could' face civil penalties

By HAIDEE V. EUGENIO
haidee_eugenio@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

At this point, the U.S. Coast Guard is still trying to educate people about the Transportation Worker Identification Credential requirement, with enforcement only as a last resort.

However, those found not in compliance with the TWIC requirement "could" face possible civil penalties.

After April 15, 2009, all mariners operating under the authority of their U.S. Coast Guard license or document are required to have a TWIC card, which costs $132.50.

Lt. Commander John Winter, chief of the Prevention and Compliance Department of the U.S. Coast Guard Sector Guam, yesterday said "licensed and documented mariners could face possible civil penalties and/or revocation actions against their Coast Guard licenses and documents."

"Vessel owners and operators who hire licensed and documented mariners without a TWIC card could also face possible civil penalties," Winter told Saipan Tribune.

In a telephone interview, Winter said the U.S. Coast Guard will go through administrative procedures, which include investigation and verbal warning, rather than revoking U.S. Coast Guard license or document right away.

Facilities in the CNMI that are regulated by the Coast Guard Maritime Transportation Act require personnel who work in security related duties to have a TWIC card after April 15, 2009.

A TWIC card is given only to U.S. citizens and those with federal work visas who are also holders of U.S. Coast Guard license.

Because of this, many non-

U.S. citizen boat drivers in the CNMI's marine tour businesses—mostly Filipinos and Japanese—will not be allowed to operate sea vessels after April 15. Securing federal work visa will be too costly for owners and operators of marine tours.

Commercial fishermen don't need TWIC card

Operators of commercial fishing vessels raised concern whether they too will need a TWIC card.

Winter reiterated that only mariners with U.S. Coast Guard licenses or documents are required to get a TWIC card.

"Commercial fishermen operating vessels under 200 gross tons (which is generally all) in this area are not required to have licenses; therefore, TWIC is not required," he said.

A TWIC is a common identification credential for all mariners holding Coast-Guard issued credentials, and all personnel requiring unescorted access to secure areas of Maritime TSA-regulated facilities and vessels.

Enrollment for TWIC has begun at the TSA office at the TSL Plaza in Garapan. Those who wish to apply for TWIC need to schedule an appointment with the TSA office at 1-866-347-8942 or pre-enroll online at <http://twicinformation.tsa.dhs.gov>.

Woman hurt in car mishap files suit

By FERGIE DE LA TORRE
fergie_deltorre@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

A woman is suing the driver of the pickup truck that hit her car in front of San Vicente Church last November.

Marjorie O. Arugay, through lawyer Eric S. Smith, sued Robert Palacios Camacho for negligence.

Arugay asked the Superior Court to order the defendant to pay her damages for pain and suffering, physical injuries, mental anguish, stress injuries, and for the loss of the use of her vehicle.

Arugay claimed that as a result of Camacho's negligence and carelessness, she suffered physical injuries and mental shock.

Police said a traffic investigator found Camacho at fault for failing to maintain his right half of the highway.

Smith stated on Nov. 10, 2008, at 7am Arugay was driving south on Highway 16 in San Vicente aboard her 1993 red Toyota Corolla. At the same time, Camacho was heading north on Highway 16 aboard a 2000 Toyota Tacoma.

Smith said Camacho lost control of the wheel of his truck, causing it to enter the southbound lane. The truck collided with Arugay's car in the southbound lane.

When a police officer arrived at the scene, Arugay's car was seen resting on the southbound lane. Camacho's truck, now resting on the passenger side, was about 20 feet away.

A police officer observed Camacho assisting Arugay by trying to control the bleeding on her head by applying pressure with a T-shirt.

Police said Arugay suffered laceration to the head that required four stitches and abrasion to the elbow and front right knee. Camacho complained of pain in the hip and back. An ambulance transported both Arugay and Camacho to the Commonwealth Health Center for further treatment.

Camacho told the officer that when he approached the curve by the church, his truck slid. Camacho said he lost control of the wheel and his truck hit Arugay's car on the southbound lane.

Police said the road was wet and slippery at the time due to rain.

Smith asserted, among other things, that Camacho was negligent because he failed to keep a proper look out for the vehicle driven by Arugay so as to avoid colliding with the car. The lawyer added that Camacho also failed to yield the right of way.

Smith said Arugay lost the use of her car as it could not be repaired.

'Decision to cancel Tinian ILS project inconsiderate'

BY MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

A member of the Tinian Legislative Delegation yesterday described the decision to cancel the instrument landing system project as an "inconsiderate" move by Tinian lawmakers who should actually be pushing it on behalf of the Tinian tourism industry.

Sen. Jude Hofschneider said he disagrees with the decision to scrap the project, citing the reason as unjustified.

The ILS project has been in the works since 2006 but was delayed due to opposing views and funding issues. It finally got $4 million from the Office of Insular Affairs in 2007, with the money taken from the island's wastewater project.

Hofschneider, who attended the meeting between CPA and the Tinian delegation, said he had recommended consulting the gaming commission and existing and prospective business operators before making a decision on the issue.

"As a member, I am not in support of canceling the project. I believe we've gone so far on the ILS. For me, canceling the project in its entirety is not the best move. Why not push for at least the design work? I don't think the exclusion of the China market in the U.S. waiver program justifies scrapping the whole thing," he told Saipan Tribune yesterday.

"I believe we should continue at least the design phase... and I am sure we can come up with the additional money to complete the project [in the future]," he added.

Tinian Legislative Delegation chair Sen. Joseph Mendiola earlier said they decided to stop the ILS project as a result of the exclusion of the China market from the U.S. visa waiver program. He said they are looking at transferring the project's funds to priority projects at the Tinian airport.

Hofschneider said he is worried that OIA may not allow the transfer or reprogramming of the funds for other purposes.

"They cannot just disregard the ILS because it already has funding which can be asked to be returned by OIA. I know the $4 million is not enough for the whole project, but I am pretty sure we can find additional money for that project. All I ask is to at least push through with the design phase...because it's been in the works for a long time," said Hofschneider.

Yesterday, Sen. Joseph Mendiola confirmed that a meeting between the CIP administrator, CPA, and delegation is scheduled for Monday.

"We will work it out on Monday," he told Saipan Tribune.

Mendiola confirmed Hofschneider's attendance at the meeting with CPA.

Hofschneider disclosed that the instrument landing system is among the requirements and conditions of new casino investors like Bridge Investment LLC, which will cater to mostly Chinese tourists and travelers.

"From the very start, they've been very straightforward to say that they will not land on Tinian without the ILS," he said.

He added that the ILS project was, in fact, among the undertakings considered for funding using federal stimulus funds.

"ILS is vital in our tourism industry. We already committed over $20 million to improve our airport, including the runway, because our goal is to make it an international airport and in order to do that, we need to have international amenities like ILS," he said.

Hofschneider, however, admitted that the existing airport on the island can accommodate direct flights and provide safe landing for aircrafts.

The lawmaker believes an ILS will improve air traffic to the island.

'ILS for pilots' school on Tinian?'

Sen. Hofschneider yesterday countered information that the project is being pushed for a planned pilots' school on Tinian—at the expense of the government.

"I am not aware of such a plan...but if there is, why not?" he told Saipan Tribune.

He asked the delegation to consult with the gaming commission and the lone casino operator on island, Tinian Dynasty Casino & Hotel, and prospective operators before coming up with a final decision on the project.

"Let's hear what they would say first before we finally make the decision," said Hofschneider.

Saipan Tribune tried to reach the Tinian Dynasty casino, the commissioners, and Bridge Investment LLC to get some comments but calls were not returned as of press time.

ILS facilities are a highly accurate and dependable means of navigating to the runway. When using the ILS, the pilot determines aircraft position primarily by reference to instruments. The equipment, usually installed in big airports, provides the lateral and vertical guidance necessary to fly a precision approach, where glide slope information is provided.

fendants’ motion to dismiss her Open Government Act lawsuit.

Assistant Attorney General Brad-dock Huesman appeared for Fitial, Baka, and Inos.

Order

After listening to the arguments, as-sociate judge David A. Wiseman said he will issue a ruling on whether Baka was improperly named a co-defendant in the case. Wiseman said he will also issue an order about guidelines.

The judge ordered the parties to ap-pear on April 9 to address the main issue whether Sablan is entitled to the documents that she requested.

Sablan told the media after the hearing that the court heard preliminary is-sues in the case that were raised by the government’s motion to dismiss.

Sablan said one issue was whether or not Baka should be included as a de-fendant and whether or not the defen-dants should be held personally liable or whether or not they are entitled to qualified immunity.

Sablan said the April 9 hearing will tackle the actual merits of her petition—whether or not the records that she is seeking should be subject to an exemp-tion of the Open Government Act.

Properly named

The lawmaker said her position is that Baka is properly named as a defendant under the rules of court and consider-ing he is the custodian of the records she is seeking.

As acting AG, Baka is supposed to represent the Commonwealth in all le-gal matters, Sablan said, including the lawsuit against federalization.

In her pleadings, Sablan said that, as the court has not yet reviewed the evidence and the merits of her petition, as well as the merits, if any, of the defendants’ claimed exemption from disclosure, “it is premature to determine whether or not willful and knowing violations of the law, or plain demonstrations of incompetence, have been committed by defendants in their refusal to disclose records.”

She said the OGA should be liber-ally construed to mean that Baka may be held responsible for violations of the Act in refusing to disclose records subject to disclosure, even if an OGA request was not made in a form specifi-cally and directly addressed to him.

“Significantly, the Open Govern-ment Act does not explicitly require that a public officer have a request for information specifically and directly addressed to him in order for that pub-lic officer to be held responsible for violations of the Act,” Sablan said.

Improper request

Huesman argued that some of the relief requested by Sablan’s petition are not available under the statute and is, there-fore, improper.

Huesman asserted that Baka never received any OGA request. In the de-fendants’ motion to dismiss, Huesman said Baka could not have violated the OGA as no request was made of him.

Huesman branded as an “improper request” Sablan’s prayer to hold Fitial, Baka, and Inos personally liable for all costs awarded to her in connection with her lawsuit, in addition to any civil pen-alties deemed reasonable by the court.

Huesman also asserted that to the extent required, defendants are entitled to qualified immunity from the lawsuit.

He said qualified immunity is avail-able to officials “who err in their duties so long as the mistake is one that a ‘rea-sonable’ officer could have made.”

Sablan filed the lawsuit to compel the administration to disclose where it is getting the money to fund the lawsuit against federalization.

She asked the court to issue an order mandating Fitial, Inos, and Baka to ful-fill their obligations under CNMI law by making available the requested materials within 48 hours of the court’s decision. Sablan asserted that the refusal of the defendants to disclose records iden-tifying funding sources and contracts connected to the lawsuit that has been filed on behalf of the CNMI people is a violation of the OGA.

MAYORS’

“Basically, we’re targeting the up-graded positions first before we can be able to touch any other areas,” she said.

The administration contends that with the recent passage of the $156.76 million Fiscal Year 2009 budget, they have no choice but to lay off govern-ment workers in order to stay within the budget ceiling. The exact number of employees who will be affected is still unknown.

Fleming said she was able to meet with each of the government depart-ments to determine the amount they need to reduce their budget by.

Most of the layoffs will come from the mayors’ offices, she said. Within the Office of the Governor, a large number of people within the Emergency Management Office would be affected.

Earlier this week, Tinian Mayor Jose P. San Nicolas said he was looking at implementing a 60-day furlough if all other austerity measures being consid-ered fail.

Notices of termination

Civil service employees cannot be ter-minated. For employees whose con-tracts expire April 11, they will receive a non-renewal letter, while those whose contracts last through Sept. 30 will re-ceive a 30-day notices of termination, Fleming said.

Reduced work hours, she said, is not an option.

“Even reduced hours will be very insignificant,” she said. “The only way for us is to start preparing them to be taken down, to carry all the way to Sept. 30, so we do not incur a deficit.”

Gov. Benigno Fitial, who vetoed the budget that was later overridden by the Legislature, has said politics has be-come involved. Many members of the Legislature say a budget ceiling was necessary, as hiring continued to occur despite declining revenue.

When asked why the administration is not pleased with the budget when the revenue projections provided by the administration were used as a guide, Fleming said it was not balanced. By not incorporating cost-cutting mea-sures like unpaid holidays and austerity Fridays, as well as reprogramming au-thority for the governor, the Legislature passed an unbalanced budget, she said.

The Legislature, in the budget, did in-clude one cost-cutting measure by reduc-ing the employee contribution rate to the Retirement Fund from 18 to 11 percent.

The administration authored a sepa-rate piece of legislation, introduced in the House of Representatives in February, which would implement unpaid holidays and austerity Fridays. The House has yet to vote on it and several of the scheduled austerity days have passed.

Austerity measures

Fleming said they are no longer count-ing on the Legislature to pass the aus-terity measure bill.

“We’re not going to count anymore on austerity holidays. I don’t think we’ll ever get through to them,” she said, although, she added, the adminis-tration will ask once again for the cost-cutting measures when they submit the Fiscal Year 2010 budget proposal.

Some lawmakers have said a gradual reduction in the government workforce could have prevented a mass layoff be-cause the private sector could have ab-sorbed the numbers, something Fitial disagrees with.

“I think it’s very presumptuous for anyone to think the private sector has a lot of vacancies,” he said. “As a mat-ter of fact, talking to the private sector they’re telling me they also have em-ployees they want to get rid of because business is not good.”

And, Fleming said, those businesses not laying off people are renewing the contracts of nonresident workers.

“With the layoffs, it’s going to be re-ally hard for a lot of our people to find jobs,” she added.

Will the impending implementation of federalization on June 1, which will extend U.S. immigration laws to the CNMI, including employment, have any affect on job availability in the pri-vate sector?

No, Fitial said, because “it will be delayed,” he said of the start date. The governor has asked the Department of Homeland Security for a 180-day ex-tension.

This month, not a single penny in garment sales was recorded, and gov-ernment collection from user’s fee was zero.

The last time the CNMI government collected a monthly user’s fee was in February 2009—only $746.13, gov-ernment data obtained yesterday by Saipan Tribune shows.

This is an incredible drop compared to as much as $3 million a month in user’s fee collection in previous years before garment factories started clos-ing one after the other in January 2005 when the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade expired, eliminating quotas on textile exports to the United States. The GATT had regulated all global trade in textiles and apparel since 1974.

From having 34 garment factories producing “Made in the USA” cloth-ing, Saipan now only has dilapidated buildings that once housed garment factories from San Antonio to San Vicente, Lower Base and Tanapag.

Retail stores, other commercial buildings, housing complexes and apartments near former garment fac-tories are also now eerily vacant.

The last monthly collection brings to only $476,799.33 the government’s user’s fee collection in the first five months of FY 2009 or from October to February, when the last factory was still operating, compared to almost $40 million annually in previous years.

Richard Pierce, the governor’s spe-cial assistant for trade relations and economic affairs, said 10 years ago, the CNMI collected nearly $40 million in annual user’s fee, and another $40 mil-lion in related economic contributions.

There were also approximately 25,000 total jobs in the CNMI work-ing in garment factories, service com-panies, and government because of the garment industry.

Most of the foreign workers em-ployed by the garment industry have gone back to Thailand, China, and the Philippines.

“Now, it’s just a part of the history of the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands,” Pierce told Saipan Tribune.

User’s fee is paid by businesses on locally manufactured and finished products, mainly garments, shipped out of the CNMI.

Between FYs 1998 and 2008, annual user’s fee collection ranged from $5.38 million to $39.26 million.

Without the garment industry, the CNMI’s once double-engine economy now relies solely on tourism which continues to see a decrease due to few-er flights, fewer tourists and the global economic turmoil.

Zero sales

Garment sales stood at only $13 mil-lion in FY 2009. This included only the first five months of the fiscal year, or from October to February when the last garment factory was still operating.

This is a small fraction of the annual garment sales of $146 million in FY 2008, $362 million in FY 2007, $531 million in FY 2006, and $705 million in FY 2005.

Between FYs 2001 and 2004, the an-nual garment sales ranged from $724 million to $964 million.

During its heyday, Saipan’s garment industry posted annual sales of over $1 billion.

In FY 1998, sales stood at $1.02 bil-lion, followed by $1.06 billion in FY 1999, and $1.04 billion in FY 2000.

Toxic mix

The CNMI’s crumbling economy is exacerbated by uncertainties associated with the start of the transition to fed-eral immigration by June 1 unless ex-tended, and another 50-cent increase in minimum wage by May when employ-ers are already having difficulty paying their workers and staying in business.

From the ultimate globalization suc-cess story, Saipan now faces one of the fastest economic collapses in the his-tory of America and the world because of the demise of the garment industry.

“What’s happening on Saipan is an extreme compressed version of what’s happening elsewhere in the US and the world; like a lab test of what globalizalea plants, including installation, is also $350, he said.

“We need to put a stop to this. We ask the community’s help. If they see someone stealing the plants, we hope they list down the plate number of the car and report to the police right away. These are bad times and we have to make an effort to beautify our islands. We are competing with Guam, the Philippines and other places in attract-ing tourists,” Aldan said in a telephone interview.

Babauta said TOC will continue its landscaping and beautification projects, including the median in front of Hopwood Junior High School in San Antonio and across the road from Saipan World Resort in Susupe, as well as replacing and maintenance of trees on the median in front of Microl Corp.

“We’re also looking at the Garapan area, especially the Paseo de Marian-as and the Japanese Cultural Center,” he said.

In November last year, TOC donated $13,000 to landscape three medians on Saipan, as well as to do the monthly landscape maintenance on the Port to Path Walkway.

Lao Bay Golf Resort, and the Marianas Visitors Authority.

“It’s very unfortunate that it hap-pened. We’re upset that it happened, and we hope whoever took them won’t do it again,” Ben Babauta, chairman of the Tournament of Champions and as-sistant general manager of DFS Saipan Ltd., told Saipan Tribune yesterday.

Babauta, who is also president of the Rotary Club of Saipan, said TOC will be replacing the stolen plants.

“It is important for us to replace them. As you know we have been seeing visitors from military ships, cruise ships, the annual Japanese ships, other tourists and the commu-nity in general, and we want them to be able to see—from the moment they step out of the seaport—that Saipan is beautiful,” said Babauta.

Maintenance crew from Tropical Gardens, the contractor for the Port to Path landscaping and maintenance, discovered the missing 25 Ixora Nora Grant plans on Wednesday at 9am when they were about to do their regu-lar ground maintenance.

The incident was reported imme-diately to the Department of Public Safety.

Francisco LG. Aldan, president of Tropical Gardens, said the cost of re-placing the 25 Ixora Nora Grant plants is $350, which includes the plant mat-erials and installation.

Aldan said upon closer inspection by Tropical Gardens crew, around 30 bou-gainvillea plants on the entranceway were also missing.

Candido Castro files for bankruptcy

Land surveyor Candido Igaraz Castro filed yesterday a bankruptcy petition in the U.S. District Court for the NMI.

Under a Chapter 7 bankruptcy petition, Castro estimated $0 to $50,000 assets, but claimed $1 million to $10 million in liabilities.

Castro listed at least nine creditors: Bank of Hawaii, Commonwealth Development Authority, Division of Revenue and Tax, attorney F. Matthew Smith, Isla Financial Services, Mid-Pac Micronesia, Pacific Lawyers, attorney Robert O'Connor, and SaipanCell Communications.

Under Bankruptcy Chapter 7, most assets of the debtor are liquidated as quickly as possible to pay off his creditors to the extent possible and to free the debtor to start anew.

In April 2002, Castro was sentenced to eight months in prison and ordered to pay $130,100 in monetary penalties for mail fraud.

Part of the penalties were $33,333 and $66,666 in restitution to CDA and the U.S. Department of the Interior.

In December 2004, Mid-Pac Micronesia sued Castro over alleged non-payment of debt amounting to over $11,000.

In October 2008, the U.S. government filed a civil lawsuit against Castro for the transfer of his lands on Tinian to his son to allegedly defraud the U.S. in its effort to collect $179,418 in connection with the mail fraud case. (Ferdie de la Torre)

Legislature to identify ways to restore economy

Members of the Legislature will be holding a working session today to discuss legislation that could help develop industries in the CNMI.

The planning session comes a week after the public and private sector had a similar session, and a week before the Economic Restoration Summit set for April 2 and 3.

"The idea is to take last week's meeting and bring to the Legislature [today]," Commerce Secretary Michael Ada said. "The idea is to give them, to put the ball in their court, to have them contemplate and identify ways in which legislation or regulations they develop could assist these industries in development."

The private sector drives business, but legislation develops industries by setting regulations and offering incentives, he added.

"[Today] is a critical session. I encourage the public to attend," the official said. The session is from 1pm to 4:30pm at the Multi-Purpose Center in Susupe.

At last week's meeting, federalization, lack of flights and unreliable infrastructure were some of the challenges the public and business community said the CNMI faces as it tries to identify new industries to fuel the economy, including call centers, aquaculture, alternative energy and educational tourism.

The information will be taken and shared at the U.S. Department of the Interior's Office of Insular Affairs 2009 Conference on Business Opportunities in the Islands, which will be held in Honolulu on April 6 to 8. (Kristi Eaton)

Munson continues pre-trial meeting in Villagomez case

The federal court yesterday ordered to continue today, Friday, the pre-trial conference in the case against Lt. Gov. Timothy P. Villagomez and co-defendants James A. Santos and Joaquina V. Santos.

U.S. District Court for the NMI Chief Judge Alex R. Munson said the pre-trial conference, which began last Thursday, March 19, shall continue today at 10:30am.

No reason was given in Munson's one-page order.

A pre-trial conference or a pre-trial hearing refers to a meeting of the parties and their lawyers to a case held before the court prior to the start of the actual courtroom proceedings.

According to law books, there are several reasons why such pre-trial conferences may be held: to expedite disposition of the case, help the court establish managerial control over the court action, and discourage wasteful pretrial activities.

The other reason for such conference is to facilitate a settlement of the case.

According to the indictment, Villagomez accepted a $15,000 bribe from James and Joaquina Santos for approving the purchase of Rydlyme, a cleaning and descaling chemical, for the Commonwealth Utilities Corp.

The Santos couple was also accused of bribery for offering the $15,000 to Villagomez.

All three defendants pleaded not guilty. (Ferdie de la Torre)

CPA settles dispute with Rota firm; inks five-year agreement

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The Commonwealth Ports Authority settled its dispute with Rota Terminal and Transfer Co. Inc. for the company's nearly $500,000 arrears to the agency and entered into a new agreement that allows the firm to pay its debt in five years.

CPA executive director Efrain F. Camacho also disclosed the cancellation of the eviction order issued to the Rota company in February and March.

Camacho said the company, partly-owned by Rep. Victor Hocog, asked for consideration following the eviction notice that was supposed to take effect March 13.

"We were able to settle the issue and reached an agreement with the company. CPA is now allowing the firm to continue to operate its stevedoring operation on Rota, provided they pay all arrears and balances in five years' time...and they agreed," he said.

Besides the promissory note, Camacho said RT&T also promised to keep paying its monthly lease, which will give CPA a combined payment of about $3,000 from the company.

CPA earlier terminated the firm's lease agreement and ordered it to vacate the property by March 13 after it failed to settle over $400,702 arrears as of November 2008.

RT&T signed the lease agreement with CPA in January 1996.

Camacho said among the considerations for the decision is the risk of losing the only stevedoring company on Rota.

"We're not sure if there is any other party that would be able to step in, especially on a very short notice. We're convinced that CPA's decision is for the welfare of all parties," the executive director said.

Camacho disclosed that during a meeting with the company's officials, the "significant" drop in cargo volume was discussed. "We looked at all these considerations," he said.

Camacho said CPA would make sure that the new agreement is not "ignored" by the party, as what has been noted in the past when RT&T did not make any payment to the agency.

CPA, in its attempt to generate revenues and collection this fiscal year, is running after delinquent tenants and concessionaires who have been in "default" for many years.

DPH wins $221K for diabetes, tobacco programs

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The Department of Public Health will receive a grant of $221,128 from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services for diabetes and tobacco prevention programs, according to CNMI Rep. Gregorio "Kilili" C. Sablan yesterday.

"I want to congratulate project director Tayna Camacho and all of the people who worked putting this grant together," said Sablan. "Controlling diabetes and helping people with a tobacco problem should be high on our list of public health priorities in the Northern Marianas."

Sablan also said another $364,162 of American Recovery and Reinvestment Act money would be coming to the CNMI from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The money is for the new Neighborhood Stabilization Program that will help the local government to acquire and redevelop foreclosed properties. Once rehabilitated, the properties can be resold. The purpose of the program is to stem the decline in house values that can occur when neighboring homes stand empty after foreclosure. (PR)

NMI moves forward with stimulus applications

By KRISTI EATON
kristi_eaton@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Applications for competitive stimulus grants that will go toward infrastructure projects should be completed today.

The applications will then proceed to the Office of Management and Budget where they will undergo the local vetting process, said Mike Ada, Department of Commerce Secretary. Ada is in charge of coordinating the local effort for stimulus money.

The CNMI also recently submitted the necessary materials to receive an $18.7 million grant for renewable energy and a weatherization grant worth $700,000. Both grants are formula grants, so they are based on formulas in the law, not on grant applications.

The renewable energy money will focus on energy efficiency, such as solar lighting. The weatherization money will go to families to make their homes more energy efficient by upgrading old air-conditioners and water heaters, insulating walls and roofs, installing thermal windows, and sealing cracks around doors and windows that waste energy.

Other areas involving the Commonwealth Utilities Corp. include power distribution projects. Most of the projects have gone through the local vetting process and will be certified by Gov. Benigno Fitial next week, Ada said.

CUC is hoping to receive the largest share of competitive stimulus money for the CNMI. The agency's projects within the three utilities—power, water and wastewater—totals $40 to $50 million, CUC executive director Antonio Muna said.

Ada said the stimulus application process, which began after President Obama signed the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act into law on Feb. 17, has developed overtime.

After it was reported that some errors occurred in CUC applications, it was decided the technical side would need to work closely with the grant writers to make sure everything was correct, Ada said.

"We're going to have people write grants, but we're going to have the technical people look over them. We're having them review them before we send them out to the grant writers for conciseness and all that," the commerce secretary added.

Over 120 experiments on display at GCA science fair

BY MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

A total of 122 experiments were on display at the Grace Christian Academy campus yesterday in celebration of the school's third Science Fair.

Elementary students displayed 58 projects, while the junior high division had 34. There were about 30 from the high school division.

Leah Dalusung, science fair coordinator for elementary and high school, said the students have working on their projects since January.

Dalusung said it is their goal to develop the students' critical thinking skills by making them actualize the scientific method: identifying the problem, doing the experiment, coming up with a hypothesis, and reaching a conclusion.

The school holds the event every two years.

Yesterday's competition will have top three winners in each of the five contest categories: biology, health, chemistry, physics, and earth and science.

Entries were judged based on scientific method, scientific knowledge, presentation, thoroughness, creativity and God's creation.

Today, about 60 students will be awarded first to third honors during the school's celebration of parents and teachers' conference.

Dalusung said that compared to previous entries, students entered more interesting and challenging topics this year.

"Because they had more time for research this year, we've seen a lot of more interesting projects from our students. Our objective is for them to be able to answer questions scientifically," she told Saipan Tribune, adding that through this activity, students were also able to develop camaraderie, unity, cooperation, and teamwork among themselves as they have to work as a group and individually.

Sixth grader Michelle Kim showed this reporter how she and her group began working on their entry, an electric buzzer. "We did a lot of research and practice for this," she told Saipan Tribune, adding that it is their objective to impress the judges during the project's actual demonstration.

Yesterday's competition was a first for Kim.

Eight graders Tim Dela Rosa, Edward Kim and Justin Cho amazed the judges with their creative entry on solar-powered desalination.

They said they wanted to build a model on how to use solar power instead of electricity to purify water on the islands. The group found that salt water can be changed into purified water in nine hours using solar power.

"This experiment will benefit the islands because it is surrounded by salt water. We can also help people save money and provide fresh water to everyone who does the experiment," the students said.

Other entries in the high school division included Pollution Air, Smart Senses, Brain Efficiency, Growth of Microorganism, Stress, Which Gender Has Better Peripheral Vision, Catching Breath, Effects of Music on Blood Pressure, Color Memory, and Snow Flake Drink.

Feds approve $5M for Saipan runway rehab

BY MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The Commonwealth Ports Authority will be getting $5 million for the rehabilitation of the Francisco Ada International Airport, according to CNMI Rep. Gregorio Sablan, who relayed the good news to the CNMI yesterday.

In a statement, the lawmaker said the funding will come from the stimulus fund approved by President Barack Obama last month.

"The money will be available for rehabilitation of the runway at the Francisco C. Ada/Saipan International Airport," said Sablan, adding that this is another example of how stimulus funds can create jobs and help the CNMI build the base for a healthy economy in the future.

Sablan said the funds are being awarded by U.S. Department of Transportation.

CPA executive director Efrain Camacho had described the runway rehabilitation as the agency's top priority project this fiscal year and will cost a total of $20 million.

"The runway rehabilitation is a ready-to-do project and we intend to use the stimulus package on this primary undertaking to avert future damages and impact," he said in an earlier interview with Saipan Tribune.

Camacho said the additional funding for the stimulus money will come from the airport improvement project grants that provide annual assistance to CPA projects.

Saipan Tribune learned that bidding for the rehabilitation project is set in June while construction is slated for August.

"We're expecting the full rehab work to be finished in less than two years which was also set as a condition of the stimulus package," Camacho said, adding that the project was bid out together with the relocation of the water catchments and the temporary conversion of the taxiway to a runway.

These components, he added, are included in the estimated $20 million project to be funded by stimulus fund and the AIP grants for 2009.

Camacho said that also up for completion this year are two other priority projects of CPA: the procurement of a third backup generator and the upgrade of 15-year-old public address system at the Saipan airport.

It was learned that the third generator and other components of the project will cost $6.8 million.

Camacho also said that CPA has received the approval of FAA for the public address system upgrade and renovation work at both the international and commuter terminal buildings.

The project will cost $4 million, according to Camacho.

"Hopefully, we can see a new PAS within the year," he said, adding construction is slated for four months.

A LOOK BACK AT PAST YEARS' HEADLINES

March 27, 2000

Bill revives financial aid to students

A new financial assistance scheme for local students pursuing higher education is under review in the House of Representatives again barely two years after the government cut funding for the existing program. Rep. Brigida Ichihara, chair of the Education Committee, has introduced a comprehensive measure that will set out the policy on various government-funded educational grants, including loans and aid Under House Bill 12-140, an assured funding of at least $3 million every year and a new scholarship office administered by the Northern Marianas College will be implemented to provide financial assistance to local students attending college here and elsewhere.

Borja gears up for 2001 polls; slams Republicans

In what appeared to be the start of his political campaign, former Lt. Gov. Jesus C. Borja slammed the Republican Party for its failure to revive the economy, improve the quality of education and ease strains in CNMI-Federal relations. During Saturday's fundraising event of the Democratic Party, Mr. Borja asked the people to begin asking what the present administration has achieved in all these three areas. "What is their plan to solve the economy? None. In improving relations with the federal government, what did they do? None. In education, what have they done? They may have done something but perhaps, they have taken us backward rather than forward," he said. In evaluating the achievements of the Tenorio administration, he also urged the people to ask the same questions around.

59 foreign investors visit CNMI

With efforts geared toward the alleviation of the Commonwealth's economic conditions, the CNMI played host to 59 foreign investors who traveled to the islands over the weekend for a two-day trade mission. The investors were invited over by Michael Kwan, chairman of the Hong Kong Entertainment Ltd., which operates the multi-million dollar facility Tinian Dynasty Hotel and Casino. The businessmen flew over from mainland China and Hong Kong to look around for possible investment opportunities in the Northern Marianas, said Tinian Dynasty Hotel General Manager Tom Liu. Mr. Liu said the delegation of 59 Chinese businessmen received warm welcome from local officials led by Gov. Pedro P. Tenorio and Tinian Mayor Francisco M. Borja.

Foreign investments dwindle in 2000

Foreign investment to the CNMI continued its downward spiral as the Department of Commerce reported only three approved applications by foreign companies wishing to do business in the Commonwealth last year. On paper, the three companies represent only a total of $750,000 in foreign capital infusion to the Commonwealth. The foreign investment figure is far worse than the six registered in 1999 and the four approved foreign investments in 1998. Under Public Law 10-44, capital invested by foreign companies should not be less than $150,000 in a public organization and not less than $250,000 in a private investment. In addition to the foreign investment minimum, the Foreign Investment Office also levies a $100,000 security deposit for alien companies setting up businesses in the Commonwealth under PL 10-44.

Country of Peace baffles legislators

Questions over the intent of the Global Country of Peace to establish a "sovereign" state within Rota has left the Legislature with conflicting opinions about the organization, including unanswered questions whether it is a religion, a cult, or a legitimate scientific group. Most lawmakers interviewed after the presentation of the organization at the House of Representatives chamber expressed concern not so much with the doctrines and practices of the group or their plans to establish projects on Rota but on the political issue of sovereignty and the group's request to be granted such. The group's leader, whom they called His Majesty King Raja Nader Raam, led about 15 members of the group to the legislative presentation, where they were asked questions by lawmakers as to the group's philosophy, intentions, and plans for Rota.

You can depend on Detroit

Quick, which car brand do you suppose buyers report as being the most dependable after three years of ownership?

If you said Lexus, Toyota or Honda, your perceptions are pretty much in line with those of most American consumers, whose love affair with Asian cars is growing even as Detroit's once-mighty Big Three fight for survival. But you'd also be wrong.

Tied for first place on J.D. Power's annual survey of vehicle dependability, released last week, were Jaguar and Buick -- two brands whose reputations haven't yet caught up with their improvements in quality. As General Motors and Chrysler try to convince Washington that they're worthy of another $22 billion in taxpayer-funded loans, their biggest challenge may not be demonstrating that they can make better cars, but that they can convince buyers that their tarnished brands are worth another look.

March 31 is the deadline for the two companies to prove their viability to the federal government, which has already shelled out $13.4 billion to GM and $4 billion to Chrysler; both companies say they need even bigger infusions of cash to avoid bankruptcy.

The reputation of American-built cars has been declining for years, and for good reasons. Because of labor costs that far exceeded those of foreign competitors and some poor strategic decisions, U.S. automakers scrimped on materials and engineering for passenger cars. The results are apparent in J.D. Power and Associates surveys; in 2008, 63 percent of U.S. car shoppers said they considered buying an Asian brand, up from 60 percent the year earlier. Worse, the surveys show that younger buyers are increasingly attracted to foreign-built cars, which bodes ill for Detroit.

Yet even if consumers don't realize it, Detroit is turning itself around. Setting aside the less-than-realistic promises to return to profitability that GM and Chrysler have been making as they argue for more bailout money, domestic automakers are already building cars that are better than their reputations. Buick, a troubled GM division whose sales have been sliding since the mid-1980s, has nonetheless been at or near the top of J.D. Power's dependability surveys for the last five years, and other American brands have recently been matching or exceeding their foreign competitors.

We still think bankruptcy is a better option than another expensive bailout for Chrysler and GM. But if the car czars in Washington decide differently, they'd better be certain that the automakers have a plan to retool their images as well as their factories.

A family's final right

Eight years into the war on terror, military wives are aces at anticipatory grief. The possibility of loss was introduced so early in my marriage, it may as well have been an attendant at the wedding. Immediately after our brief pre-deployment ceremony at city hall, my husband made sure I had our marriage certificate safely stored, as well as his will.

While he was at war, I mentally rehearsed his funeral a hundred times, right down to the psalms and the finish on the casket fittings. And many of us Army wives, in the recesses of our closets, have stashed a black dress, just in case—if not for our own husband's funeral, then someone else's. The military preaches readiness, after all, and, we reason, if tragedy comes, we may not handle ourselves perfectly in the abyss of grief, but damn it, we'll be prepared.

In the ongoing exercise of "what if," wives and military families now have a policy change to consider.

Last month, Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates announced the Pentagon's decision to lift the complete ban on video and photos of the return of fallen troops to domestic soil. The ban, dating to the 1991 Persian Gulf War, covers the transfer of flag-draped caskets at Delaware's Dover Air Force Base, the first U.S. stop en route to the final resting place for deceased military personnel. Now it will be up to the families of the service members killed whether to allow the media to record what happens at Dover.

Gates asserts that the decision "should be made by those most directly affected, on an individual basis, by the families of the fallen. We ought not presume to make that decision in their place." A recent poll indicated that two-thirds of Americans are in favor of the change.

Within my own circle of active-duty military and veterans' wives, the numbers are little different. In fact, they're in constant flux, as we hotly debate the issue at playgrounds, in cafes and on blogs. We go back and forth: Which side do you favor—the public's right to know or your own right to privacy? In this wide-ranging spousal social network, there are stay-at-home moms and soldiers, Ph.D.s and burlesque dancers, Bible-clutching liberals and conservatives who never darken a church doorstep. Contrary to stereotype, we don't move in Stepfordian lock step, and our opinions are as diverse as our ranks.

One acquaintance, favoring privacy, said that if the worst were to happen to her husband and someone wielding a camera dared to elbow in on her family's grief, she'd "open up a can of Army wife whoop-ass." The image of the modern military spouse is half-frontier wife, half-Care Bear—by turns stoically able and cooingly comforting. But when it comes to acting on behalf of our kin and the larger military family, make no mistake: Wives are warriors too.

I get where the privacy-or-else camp is coming from. Though I could not have anticipated this when I married a soldier in 2002, I have come to care for troops and their families with a ferocity that words fail to elucidate. My instinct is to wave away onlookers, to protect, to defend. The civilian world, in particular the media, is justifiably suspect.

By LILY BURANA

Special to the Los Angeles Times

Burana is the author of I Love a Man in Uniform: A Memoir of Love, War, and Other Battles. Her husband, a veteran of Operation Iraqi Freedom and the Persian Gulf War, is an analyst at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in New York.

Though I have an occupational link to that realm, I harbor my own mistrust of the media, along with some cynicism about a public that fetishizes the warrior class yet can't wholly understand it. Times are stressful enough for military families without adding fear of exploitation.

But as much as I relate to the protective stance of "No, you can't come in," I respect those who would welcome the media, saying, in essence, "Take him, he's yours too. He is our country's son." Let these photos be his final act of service. In the name of honor and authenticity, I want the American people to see how the military respects its own, in aching ceremonial flourish, down to the last detail—caskets being carefully loaded on planes; the gun salute; the rap-tap-tap of the sticks on the snare drum rim, marking the cortege cadence in the graveyard.

Military wives know that images are powerful, even ones shared only among ourselves. Last Christmas, I told my beautiful friend Rebekah, whose family is stationed at Fort Bragg, that I teared up after receiving the holiday card that showed her in a sleigh with her young son and newborn daughter whose father had yet to meet her because he was deployed.

That's not all, Rebekah said. She had to contend with people getting the card and thinking the worst had happened to her husband. "What kind of life am I raising my family in," she wondered, "that I worry that someone will assume he's dead?"

And images of flag-draped coffins—well, my Army-strong posture dissolves at the sight. They bring me face to face with what I might have lost, a terror blast that fires right through me. What startles me is how raw it feels; years past my husband's last deployment, the mere glimpse of such photographs makes that fear leap up inside, fierce and alive.

Had my husband been killed in action, which route would I have chosen for his return were I given the chance—public or private? I can't say for certain, but I'm grateful that military families now get to decide for themselves, a rare shot at agency in a way of life where so many choices—major and minor, life or death—are made for you.

When we discuss what any of us might choose, all I can do for now is weep at the specter of loss and listen. And that's OK because for the moment, no one I know has to make such a decision.

I hope we never will.

The closer

I was traveling on business, doing a few-day stint in middle America between assignments in the Caribbean and the west Pacific.

And that's when I noticed her. She was the only Filipina I've ever seen in that particular city.

She was nervous. She kept patting her hair. Her husband, also Filipino, looked ill at ease in his necktie. He played with the knot and fidgeted. He clutched an envelope and tapped it on the tabletop absently.

They were perhaps 35 or 40 years old, obviously hard-working middle class. I had a table near their booth in the cafe. They were waiting for somebody. I'm not the nosy type, but when I saw who they were waiting for my antennae perked up.

A few minutes later he walked in. He sported a thick gold chain around one wrist, wore a cheap shopping mall suit, and was attended by a haze of drugstore aftershave. He was big but nimble, and looked like he played football at some junior college maybe 15 years ago. A scrape or two with the law wasn't out of the question.

He was a closer.

He dropped a few friendly, but pointed, hints about how important he was and how limited his time was. They were grateful that this nice man would meet them at the cafe, instead of making them drive all the way to his office (which I'm sure didn't exist). Lucky for them he just happened to have business in the neighborhood, so he could "fit them in" to his pressing, high-powered schedule.

As I connected the dots, I surmised that I was seeing the couple getting swindled out of their life savings. Peering backwards to set the stage, I reckoned that a Pitch Man had sold them on the "investment" scam, probably a matter of days before, and now the closer was moving in for the kill.

Just to head off any last minute dissent, the Closer, oozing friendliness, smoothly boxed in the wife with rhetorical questions. Having worked hard as a registered nurse, working overtime to provide for her family's future, didn't she want the peace of mind that financial security (the "investment") would bring?

She did.

And wouldn't she like the finer things in life, such as shopping, vacations, and cruises?

She would. Especially the cruises. She had never taken a cruise. The Caribbean, they all agreed, sounded nice.

And didn't she want to send her children to the best school and colleges?

Of course.

As easy as that was, the husband was an even easier mark. He was saturated in American pop-culture money talk, which plugs the U.S. airwaves, bookstores and magazine racks. He wanted a "piece of the action."

So he lapped it up when the Closer said things like "aggressive stance" and "reinvested capital gains." The husband was relishing his role as a player of high finance, enjoying his status in his wife's eyes as a kitchen-table genius. The Closer played it well. After dropping a buzzword or two to tickle the husband's ego, the Closer would say to the wife, "Sorry to get so technical here, you can ask your husband about it later, he's obviously real smart about business."

As for the "investment" itself, from what I could glean it was a comical collage of blue sky and horse crap, artfully arranged so it probably wouldn't attract immediate regulatory attention.

The check was for a bit over $60,000. The Closer was in and out in about 12 minutes.

Having handed over the envelope with the check in it, the husband had nothing to tap on the table. So he fidgeted with his necktie some more, then loosened it now that their important meeting was over.

Here's the big picture: Nobody can understand "investments" and "investing" without understanding the psychology of what I witnessed. This psychology, be it with small, cheesy schemes, or big "legitimate" ones, is what fuels bubbles and, of course, the crashes. Entire books are written about it, but I'm happy to take a whack at it in 800 words.

Still, for some reason, seeing an apparently decent, hard-working Filipino couple blindly leaping into the American "investment" frenzy, well, it was odd. Hopefully it is rare, but the Closer was so good at his approach that I wondered if he and his cohorts were working a network of stateside Filipinos.

Twelve minutes. That's all it took.

Su Xi, Ma Li, and Xi Xi in the House of Horus

TV USA channel has a great ad line to its trailers: Characters welcome! Here are three characters.

Ugly duckling Su Xi of Jiangsu province near Shanghai, renowned textile capital of China, came to work for a garment factory on Saipan. Like her colleagues, she paid three-years' worth of earnings for the privilege of working here. After two years, her contract was not renewed. Though contracted for three years at source, the CNMI only recognizes yearly contracts. Su Xi had not earned enough to recoup her investment, let alone show anything for her two-year stint.

The Immanuel United Methodist Church of Saipan at the time ran a Marianas Resource Center in Oleai, which served inter alia as a "sanctuary" for those who sought assistance on labor and immigration matters. The Center initiated a community development project that operated on the principle that to be effective, one needed to deal with all the problems and all the people within the delimited geography at the same time. In the community grid were three Beach Road karaoke bars across from the popular Oleai Bar and Grill.

The MRC participated in the mayor's food assistance program. On Thanksgiving Day, it distributed food items to the needy residents of the village, including bar workers. Su Xi begun work in one of the bars owned by an out-of-work alcoholic and his mama-san wife. They sought the Center's assistance on his addiction and her immigrant papers. Su Xi participated in the Center's Christmas and New Year festivities where the cultural diversity of the Church members and the surrounding community were lifted up, affirmed, prayed over and celebrated.

Shy, tall and lanky, Su Xi looked gaudy and anxious. In a six-month period, her low self-esteem and minimal English got a boost from her regular contact with the Center. The ugly duckling became an elegant woman. One day she announced that she was getting married. She came to me to say goodbye. A lingering embrace perturbed a Center volunteer who later publicly blurted out her discomfort, leaving an earned blemish on my reputation among my puritanical peers. We didn't see her again before the group moved back to the Kobler Korean Methodist grounds.

About the same time, Ma Li of Liaoning's Shenyang also came to work for the garment industry. Similarly, she maxed her credit to afford the trip but she lasted only a year as a sewer. She transferred to a restaurant, fell in love and lived with a flamboyant Guangzhou hua hua gong zi (playboy) businessman who had a gambling habit that drove them both to penury.

Ma Li married at 18 but was widowed early. A motorcycle accident killed her young, politically astute and independently well-off husband. A childless housewife who never needed to be gainfully employed, the husband's parents had no reason to keep her from returning home.

Ma Li's liaison with the playboy did produce a son, and when she went to Guangzhou to join him after his business was bankrupt, it turned out that a ta lao po (first wife) with two children already existed.

Ma Li took her shattered illusions home, left her son's one-year expenses with her sister, and returned to Saipan to manage her niece's newly opened karaoke bar. The niece, married to a local, was my barber. Two years after Ma Li returned, I became her English tutor. Ma Li was a determined immigrant, first, tying up with a Correction officer who promised marriage but had difficulty separating from his estranged wife, and later, consorting with a homeland security officer whose ways with other ladies belied the sweetness of his lips.

In a four-month period, we located a buyer for the karaoke club. Before we could close the deal, the FBI and Falun Gong interfaced and when I returned from my father's Honolulu funeral, Ma Li was at the stockade awaiting trial for human trafficking. She is now serving a four-year sentence in the mainland. My professional and personal involvement with Ma Li painfully cost me a marriage.

Xi Xi of Hangzhou near Shanghai was a despondent pedestrian when I ran into her in front of a cosmetic store in Chalan Kanoa where I just conducted English lessons for Korean nationals. A couple of young thugs snatched her purse containing $900, a cell phone and personal effects. Penniless and unable to call friends, she was set to walk all the way to San Jose. I offered her a ride.

Letter to the Editor

Lack of continuity at NMC

I am writing an open letter to the Board of Regents, one that contains a message I could not convey while I was a member of the board lest I be accused of "micromanaging" and interfering in the president's management of the institution. Now that I am no longer a regent on NMC's board, I am free to act as a private citizen concerned about the betterment of NMC and as a watchdog that is willing to make publicly known the problems at our lone postsecondary institution and how they negatively impact the quality of higher education and professional training throughout the Commonwealth. And so it is that I can now write and talk openly on essential issues about what the Board of Regents should be focusing their attention on, particularly at a time close to the end of Dr. Carmen Fernandez's current employment contract that ends in May 2009.

Now that the college has finally completed what was left to be done relative to the remaining issues relating to its show cause accreditation status, I would personally like to thank NMC's hard-working people and their families for supporting them as they spent nights and weekends at the college in order to address the commission's concerns and recommendations. Thank you for your dedication to our students and to our institution.

The Board of Regents will soon review the "Show Cause Report" prior to its being sent to the accrediting commission. Hopefully NMC will be taken off show cause in June 2009. But getting off show cause should not be the ultimate goal of an institution of higher education aspiring for excellence.

An essential component of education excellence is the general overall climate that characterizes an institution. How does NMC fare in this regard? Based on what is reported to me, there appears to be a dark cloud hanging over faculty and staff due to a particular phrase in the contract of every employee at NMC. The phrase gives the CEO immense latitude for abuse of power, a power which the current president has been wielding regularly since the beginning of her term of office.

Please, NMC regents, take a hard look at the wording of the employee contract and eliminate the clause that opens the door for any CEO to abuse their power.

Continuity of faculty and staff at any institution is essential for continuity of policy and good practices and, more importantly, continuity of accreditation. Let me just cite some examples that demonstrate the lack of continuity at NMC: Since Dr. Fernandez became president (in less than a two-year period) four board members (a majority of the total number) have resigned prior to the end of their term of office. During the same period, the college has gone through two deans of Instruction, three deans of Student Services, two directors of Library Services, two directors of Admission and Records, and is on its second director of the Office of Institutional Effectiveness. One can only wonder about the number of faculty and support staff not renewed during the short tenure of president Fernandez at NMC. Shouldn't the board be looking into this to determine the cause for this lack of continuity in staffing and the high rate of turnover in these key positions?

What is now happening at NMC is similar to the situation when Dr. Fernandez was a Guam senator. Attrition rates amongst her staff were definitely higher than normal. For validation of this contention, check out KUAM News reports of 2003 on July 9, Sept. 5, Sept. 16, Nov. 2, and Nov. 26.

Does the Board of Regents want to retain a person to head our only public institution of higher education who does not promote continuity in implementation of policies and procedures and institutionalization of good practices? Based upon the numerous concerns that have been brought to my attention, it appears that instead, we have an institutional leader who promotes a climate of fear.

It is up to you, NMC Board of Regents! The fate of NMC is in your hands!

A penny is what saves you

To the people of the Commonwealth: I will not list the many disasters we are all facing today for they are all too painful, but I will leave all you especially the voters something to think about over the weekend and in the coming months of why we are in the predicaments we face today.

For well over 30 years we the voters had been made to believe and understand that in order to run for the highest seat or any seat in public office, one must possess politics by birth or years of political background to include possessing the educational credentials of having a Ph.D, master's, or bachelor's degree in business administration or political science.

Please correct me if I'm mistaken when I say that the very reason we are all in the predicaments we face today is because ment we face today is because of the making and the creation of such backgrounds.

A wise old man once told me that 90 percent of people who possess a high school diploma with years of hands-on experience, hard work, determination, commitment and thorough knowledge in the field they possess prevail over the educated bookworm each time they are put to the test.

Why? The heart of an ordinary person has more sensitivity, understanding and care for the suffering and is 10 times more committed, and determined to achieve a common goal for the good of the people.

The 16th President of the United States, Abraham Lincoln, was born to uneducated farmer parents, had only 18 months of schooling, and was largely self-educated, yet he guided his country through the most devastating experience in its national history, the Civil War. Lincoln is considered by many historians to have been the greatest American president.

I am sure not one of the candidates currently running possess these traits. Remember my fellow citizens, that 99 percent of the time a penny is what saves you.

SU XI

in son-centered one-child-per-family China, she was raised by grandma and farmed out at 18 to work on garments in Jiangsu to settle a family debt. The loaner who was more than a decade her senior consented to an arranged marriage. A son issued from what she termed a "lifeless marriage"; her husband has a physical disability. He tires easily. She came to Saipan on a friend's assistance; the friend turned out to be exploitatively expensive. She expected a factory job. Instead, she was made to apprentice as a masseuse for three months before graduating to the back room.

A Saipan romantic Filipino was her first client. He has a son with a Japanuki. He took Xi Xi into his wings. Xi Xi cared for the son after school, and Romeo trained Xi Xi in the art of fluid exchange. "I have two more years with this body," she said, "before I give in to the competition." She is 29, known for repeat customers, including off-island professionals who book weeklong escort service months in advance. Paying exorbitant fees to stay as a commercial cleaner, she offered to be my helper but found and married a sailor, leaving the trade two years ahead of schedule.

Last summer, in a San Francisco streetcar, I saw a familiar face by the exit door. Attired in a simple black dress with a modest string of pearls on her neck and plain black pumps, she sat elegantly with folded hands on her lap, at first, with furrowed brows, and then a Mona Lisa almost-smile. I got off before she did and as I exited, her lips formed the unmistakable "thank you," and when I acted bewildered, she clearly enunciated, "xie xie." It was Su Xi eight years later in all her understated splendor!

Now, where are the TV script-writers when you need them? Isn't this telling worth three episodes on the USA channel?

Letters to the Editor

An open letter to all retirees

If you are a retiree or a current employee of the government and participating in the defined benefit retirement plan and haven't given much thought to the future of your retirement, you had better do so and quick.

Considering the rapid diminishment of the U.S. economy and by extension the full range of investment instruments which might otherwise be available for the Fund's portfolio, I have been giving some thought to the imminent default of pension payments in the next three or five years if the predictions of Fund officials are anywhere near being accurate. Indeed, the Fund may not have even three years.

The extreme volatility of the stock market makes it difficult to predict how the Fund's investments will perform as booms and busts are inevitable. There is no guarantee the value of today's investments as low as they currently are will remain at the same level tomorrow and thereafter. Indeed, it is almost certain they will not. There is always the possibility that the Fund's remaining investments could be wiped out sooner than predicted.

Looking unemotionally at the very real possibility of the death of the Fund and considering the matter in a realistic manner while facing cold facts, I frankly don't see where the central government will ever be able to pay its debt to the Fund or resume payments to avoid the Fund's predicted and certain "crash."

Face it. The central government simply can't pay money it doesn't have any more than you or I could.

As far as any court ever ruling to attach the government's assets for assignment to the Fund as has been suggested (hoped) by some—and the subsequent liquidation to meet the central government's financial obligation to the Fund in an attempt to preserve it—I don't think that will ever occur.

Face reality.

Such assets belong to the people of the Commonwealth—all the people—and not just a couple thousand retirees. I find it hard to believe that a jury or a court would diminish the assets of all the people to make restitution for the loss of property rights for the retirees.

More likely, the government could simply issue a worthless promissory note to retirees—and that would be the end of it. You couldn't buy a bag of betel nut with that useless paper. Think about it!

As for breaking a contract with retirees—that supposedly sacrosanct bedrock mechanism of conventional society—SO WHAT!

It wouldn't be the first time the central government broke a contract and while it may suffer a temporary "black mark" by some investors and credit rating firms, it will soon pass and be forgotten as all other unpleasanties are.

Besides contracts are broken all the time and so what if the court awards a judgment against the government? You are simply right back to where it started—facing a cold hard fact that "the government can't pay what it does not have and likely never will have." A court judgment won't make any difference.

"You can't get blood out of a turnip or make a purse out of a sow's ear" as my dear sweet granny was fond of saying.

The above is my sober assessment on the issue of the Fund's future and in my judgment "rose colored glasses" and wishful thinking on the part of some retirees won't change the outcome, as bitter as it may be to accept. Only a concerted, organized, dedicated effort on the part of all retirees can even begin to attempt to solve the problem of "their" fast approaching financial meltdown.

As I think about events that brought about the present situation resulting in the loss of confidence in the government's ability to honor its contractual and legal financial obligation to the Fund, I recall that one of the definitions of treason is "the betrayal of a trust or confidence." In my opinion what has happened to the members of the Retirement Fund by the central government if not corrected and soon amounts to nothing less than "economic treason."

As I see it there are only three things the retirees can do to even attempt to avert the personal financial catastrophe facing many people and their families. Those are: First, demand that each candidate running for office—whether for governor or a seat in the Legislature—produce a written "white paper" of their respective detailed, specific plans to preserve the financial integrity of the Fund. And don't accept the harebrained, ineffective, cockamamie, useless idea of floating a pension obligation bond. Believe me, that won't work. (For information on that subject and why "that dog won't fight" see: "Bond Financing" in the Saipan Tribune archives of Oct. 24, 2008 and March 6, 2009).

Second, call for each gubernatorial candid to participate in a public debate to offer their respective solutions to the financial crises facing the retirees.

Third, retirees and those members still working and not yet retired should organize and form an association to protect their financial future. This has even been suggested by the chairman of the Fund's board of trustees.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the new retiree's association currently being formed contact Roger Ludwick. E-mail contact is preferred at ludwick@itecnmi.com. Please indicate "Retiree's Assoc." in the subject bar. Otherwise telephone (670) 322-4950.

It doesn't just go away

On March 7, 2009, in a home on Saipan a friend of mine was brutally choked and raped in her bedroom. She is 9 years old.

After her emergency surgery the family never returned to that house. After the initial interviews and a pleasant welcome visit from the police commissioner the family has heard little on the progress of identifying the attacker.

The family is confident that the police investigators are doing everything they can to ensure an arrest and closure to this trauma, but after almost three weeks they are distraught.

The person who did this heinous crime is one of us. If the person who did this crime is a civil servant, I don't want him checking my meter. If the person who did this is a teacher I don't want him in my children's classroom. If he is a preacher I don't want him in my church. If he is a policeman I don't want him answering a call when I'm vulnerable. If he is your brother he needs help.

This is not L.A., nor is it the New York City subway where random violence happens and the criminal blends into the hordes of people coming and going. This is Saipan, an island in the Pacific with a finite population. We know who has come to our island and left it. The longer this crime goes unsolved the more chance that person will leave and go unpunished.

We all wish this did not happen. It did. It happened to all of us. We should all be having the nightmares she is having. If you have any information regarding this detestable act please contact CrimeStoppers at 234-7272. You do not have to leave your name.

Six Saipan beaches red-flagged

The Division of Environmental Quality has raised the red flag on six Saipan beaches and is advising the public not to fish or swim within 300 feet of these locations for the next 48 hours or until otherwise notified.

The affected beaches are those adjacent to the Central Repair Shop, Hyatt Regency Saipan, Fiesta Resort and Spa Saipan, Samoa Housing, Hafadai Hotel drainage and Garapan Fishing Dock.

Samples collected from these locations contained excessive concentrations of fecal indicator bacteria (enterococci) that exceeded the CNMI Marine Water Quality Standards.

These bacteria can indicate the presence of human and animal waste in the water. However, studies have shown that storm water runoff in tropical environments may also contain these bacteria from the natural environment, which may not be directly associated with public health concerns.

DEQ analyzes water samples collected from Saipan's recreational beaches and beaches and storm drainages every Wednesday. This week it analyzed samples taken from 38 locations on Saipan's coast.

Also, DEQ analyzed water samples collected from Tinian's recreational beaches and storm water drainages this week and none of the samples collected contained excessive concentration of fecal indicator bacteria. DEQ assigns a green flag to Tinian waters.

Marine water reports are also provided at www.deq.gov.mp/section.aspx?secID=4 and <http://www.cnmicoralreef.net/wq/beachcloseweeklyresults.htm>. Interested individuals and organizations can also receive email notifications of the weekly marine water quality reports. To do so, send an e-mail to environment@deq.gov.mp.

Humanities Council to launch new Chamorro book

The NMI Council for the Humanities invites the public to a book launching ceremony for a new Chamorro language publication on local history and culture to be held at the Multi-Purpose Center on Monday morning, March 30, beginning at 10am.

The book, Estoria-Hu ("My Story"), presents a collection of writings by the late Tun Juan Aguon Sanchez. It is the third title published by the Humanities Council under its Micronesian Authors Initiative and the first in that series written in the Chamorro language.

The Humanities Council established the Initiative in 2004 to promote the publication of works by indigenous Micronesian writers. Earlier titles published under the Initiative include Microchild by the late Valentine Sengebau and The Rope of Tradition by Lino M. Olopai.

Tun Juan Sanchez wrote on a wide variety of topics involving indigenous language, cultures and history in both prose and verse. He is particularly remembered for his eulogy to President John F. Kennedy, written shortly after the President's assassination in 1963.

Labor applications not OK'd if deficient, denied

The Labor Division of the Department of Labor has reiterated its policy that applications cannot be approved if they are deficient or denied. Also, renewal applications cannot be approved until prior deficiencies and denials have been cleared.

Employers and employees are encouraged to check the Labor Web site (at www.marianaslabor.net) to review the deficiencies or denials. The site will show the reason for the deficiency or denial.

"It is important that employers comply with the deficiency notice or file an appeal of the denial if they believe the deficiency notice is in error. Question about the status of an application may be directed to Mary Laine Santos at 236-0949," Labor said in a statement.

Permit duration

The division said that employers may use a number of tools, available by law and regulations since 2007, to maximize the duration of the work/entry permits of their foreign workers. These include:

■ Two-year Permits: Employers may apply for a two-year permit, instead of a one-year permit, for renewal, transfer, or new applications. The two-year permit requires payment of the fee for two years and submission of a bond for two years along with all other requirements.

■ Contract Extension: may in order to An employer may extend a contract for up to six months. This requires submission of a contract extension; a bond for the extension period; and payment of $25.00 per month for each month of extension.

■ Contract Amendment (add- shorten term): Employers who have employees expiring June 2009 or after, may amend the expiration date of an existing contracts to shorten the term with a change of expiration date on or before May 31, 2009 in order to submit a two year renewal with an expiration date in May 2011 or earlier. This requires submission of a contract amendment and payment of a $25.00 amendment fee.

The employer may then renew for a two -year term.

Early preparation and submission

Labor emphasized that it is "extremely important" for employers to submit complete applications and they do so well in advance of the expiration date. Employers may submit applications up to 45 days before expiration.

"To help ensure timely approval, employers should complete all the processing requirements prior to submitting the renewal," it said. These include obtaining the health certificate; copy of valid passport; police clearance; bond (two years if renewing for that term); and a Job Vacancy Announcement.

"The JVA is a critical component. Time for certification of a JVA can range from as little as two weeks to more than a month if there are local applicants," it said.

Use of Labor approved forms, other requirements

Employers must use Labor approved downloadable forms (unless otherwise noted). Forms can be found on the Labor website (www.marianaslabor.net)

The forms and requirements are as follows:

A review of Pygmalion

By SYLVIA HAYWOOD
SPECIAL TO THE SAIPAN TRIBUNE

The Friends of the Arts will be presenting the musical, My Fair Lady, on two successive weekends in the spring. This is the musical adaptation of George Bernard Shaw's Pygmalion. Shaw was interested in exploring the power divide between the rich and the poor as well as the differences between accents and ideas of the different social classes. The following is a condensed explanation of Acts I through V of the play, Pygmalion, and will appear on four successive Fridays before the musical is presented at the Multi-Purpose Center on Beach Road. The first part was published on March 20, 2009.

The next day at 11am Higgins and Pickering are at Higgins's place on Wimpole Street. They are just breaking for lunch when Mrs. Pearce, the housekeeper, shows Liza in. She looks a little better than she did the night before and has arrived in a cab. She wants to take language lessons from Higgins. She offers to pay him some of the money back that he gave her the night before. Ultimately, she would like to have her own flower shop and needs to be able to speak in a more genteel manner.

Higgins is intrigued, especially, after Pickering bets him that he could not pass her off as a lady at the Ambassador's Ball in six months. After much arguing between Mrs. Pearce, who didn't feel that it would be correct to have Liza live in the house with two men, they come to an agreement that she will live there, study and learn and Higgins will set her up in a flower shop when she has accomplished her goal.

Pickering is concerned about Liza's reputation as is Liza's father, Alfred, who shows up and demands that his daughter come home. Ultimately, Higgins learns that Alfred is only concerned about getting some money from Higgins. Higgins provides Alfred with enough money to entertain his "missus" and get married if he want to do so. Alfred is happy with this and goes his merry way.

A few months later, after studying very hard, Eliza is presented to Henry Higgins' mother, against her wishes, but Henry explains that he wants to try out Eliza's accent on some of her high society friends. Surprisingly, some of those friends are Freddie, his mother and sister Clara from the Covent Gardens scene in Act I.

No one recognizes Eliza and Freddie immediately falls in love with her. Henry's mother scolds her son and Mr. Pickering because she feels that no amount of education will change Eliza's background. She also does not approve of Eliza living at Henry's home. She also feels that Henry and Pickering are treating Eliza like a "live doll."

Both men feel that they take Eliza seriously and are very proud of themselves, even though it is Eliza's ear for accents that has allowed her to progress so far.

Next week, we will find that the relationship between Eliza and Henry Higgins has warmed considerably, but is still on rocky ground.

Sylvia Haywood is the publicity chairman for the Friends of the Arts.

To be continued next Friday.

The letter, embossed with the official White House seal, reads, "We are pleased that you joined us at the White House for the signing of the proclamation to create the Pacific Marine National Monuments. Your gifts will always remind us of your support throughout the process that led this special occasion."

Friends of the Monument's Agnes M. McPhetres presented then-first lady Bush with two orange Mariana Trench Monument t-shirts after the monument declaration signing in Washington, DC on January 6, 2009.

The former first lady added, "Conservation and protection of our ocean resources is vitally important to our nation and the world. I am proud of the accomplishments of my husband's administration to protect America's oceans. He joins me in sending best wishes to your organization for future success in advancing marine conservation."

The letter from the former first lady included an autographed picture of her and former President George W. Bush.

Friends of the Monument's Angelo O. Villagomez said of the letter, "I am really proud of our people. We are showing the world how local actions can have global consequences. Even the former President of the United States and his first lady know about our work here."

The Friends of the Monument was the main proponent for a marine monument in the Marianas. When local elected leaders were not receptive to the idea of a marine monument, the Friends started a petition drive and collected over 6,000 signatures from local residents. The group also gained endorsements from the business community and prominent community leaders.

The islands' political establishment ultimately supported the monument. According to a statement issued by Gov. Benigno R. Fitial on the day of the designation, "I welcome President Bush's historic announcement establishing the Marianas Trench Marine National Monument... Over the past few months, I have been actively engaged in discussions with the White House Council on Environmental Quality regarding the objectives and scope of the proposed monument. I have been joined in these discussions by President Pete Reyes of the Commonwealth Senate and Speaker Arnold Palacios of the Commonwealth House of Representatives."

When asked about what he was going to do with the letter, Friends of the Monument's Ignacio V. Cabrera said, "I'm going to hang it on my wall at home so that I can remember all we have accomplished."

Hopeful signs, but economy not out of the woods

WASHINGTON (AP)—Glimmers of hope for the economy—better home sales and higher demand for goods, plus optimism from the White House and a nearly 20 percent rally in stocks—have some people wondering if the worst is over.

Not so fast, say many economists. Layoffs are still mounting and home prices are still falling in an economy shrinking at an alarming rate. A recovery anytime soon doesn't seem likely.

"We may be seeing the end of the beginning of this recession, but it is not the beginning of the end of the downturn," said David Wyss, chief economist at Standard & Poor's in New York.

Still, the recent news has been better than expected. On Wednesday, the Commerce Department said demand for big-ticket manufactured goods, which had fallen for six months in a row, actually rose by 3.4 percent in February.

And reports this week have shown sales of both new and existing homes rising by about 5 percent last month.

On Wall Street, the landscape looks better. The Dow Jones industrials gained about 90 points on Wednesday to close a fraction of a point under 7,750—an 18 percent rally from its low point on March 9.

And President Barack Obama struck a more hopeful tone during his televised news conference Tuesday night. "We're beginning to see signs of progress," Obama said, adding that Americans should have a "renewed confidence that a better day will come."

"The good news is that we don't have the sort of unrelentingly persistent declines we had been seeing," said Nariman Behravesh, chief economist at IHS Global Insight, who thinks the economy "may be approaching a bottom."

The GDP fell at an annual rate of 6.2 percent in the fourth quarter. Behravesh expects an even more severe decline for this quarter, and even a slight positive by the end of this year.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Asian stocks gain as US data boost recovery hopes

HONG KONG (AP)—Asian markets gained Thursday, building on this month's rally as better-than-forecast economic data in the U.S. buoyed hopes that government stimulus measures are starting to heal the global economy. Every major market across Asia advanced as investors took relief in figures showing orders at U.S. factories for cars, household appliances and other durable goods climbed 3.4 percent last month. Also, new home sales rose 4.7 percent in February. The figures—better than the market's expectations—lifted optimism that demand in the world's largest economy might bottom out in the coming months. That's critical for export-driven Asian countries like Japan, South Korea and Taiwan whose economies are getting hammered as American companies and consumers cut back their spending amid the country's worst recession in decades.

Postal chief says post office running out of money

WASHINGTON (AP)—The post office will run out of money this year unless it gets help, Postmaster General John Potter told Congress on Wednesday as he sought permission to cut delivery to five days a week. "We are facing losses of historic proportion. Our situation is critical," Potter told a House panel. The agency lost $2.8 billion last year and is looking at much larger losses this year. Reducing mail delivery from six days to five days a week could save $3.5 billion annually, Potter said. Potter also urged changes in how the post office pre-pays for retiree health care to cut its annual costs by $2 billion.

Source: IBM to lay off 5,000 US-based workers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—IBM Corp. plans to lay off about 5,000 U.S. employees in a new round of job cuts, the Associated Press has learned. The move reflects IBM's aggressiveness in shifting labor to lower-cost regions like India and keeping its profits aloft at a time when other technology companies' earnings are tumbling. An IBM manager knowledgeable about the plans said the cuts will come from the services division and workers will be informed Thursday. The person spoke on condition of anonymity Wednesday because he was not authorized to discuss the plan publicly. The layoffs were reported earlier by The Wall Street Journal. The cuts will affect about 4 percent of IBM's U.S.-based work force, which totaled 115,000 at the end of 2008. In a sign of how quickly IBM is staffing up in emerging markets, last year IBM had nearly as many workers in Brazil, China, India and Russia—113,000—as it did in the U.S.

Sources: Extensive regulatory overhaul planned

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Obama administration is proposing an extensive overhaul of financial regulations to increase oversight of such exotic instruments as credit default swaps that have been blamed for contributing to the worst financial crisis to hit the country in seven decades.

Officials said Wednesday that the administration will seek to regulate the market for credit default swaps and other types of derivatives and require hedge funds to register with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner was scheduled to outline the administration's proposals in testimony Thursday before the House Financial Services Committee. Administration officials provided details of the plan ahead of the testimony only on condition of anonymity. The program the administration was presenting to Congress will also include a recommendation for creation of a systemic risk regulator, possibly at the Federal Reserve, to monitor risks to the entire system.

NY judge freezes assets of Madoff's brother

NEW YORK (AP)—A Nassau County judge on Wednesday temporarily froze the assets of Bernard Madoff's brother after he was accused in a lawsuit of losing nearly a half million dollars in a trust he administered.

The lawsuit claims Peter B. Madoff took $478,000 that belonged to Andrew Ross Samuels, 22, and invested it in his brother's Ponzi scheme that fleeced investors of billions of dollars.

Samuels, a Brooklyn law student from Long Island, received the money from his grandfather, Martin J. Joel, who had placed it in the trust in 1997 to help pay for the young man's education. It was supposed to be his inheritance.

Both Peter Madoff and Joel administered the trust, the lawsuit said. But after Joel died in 2003, Peter Madoff became the sole trustee and invested Samuels' money in his brother's firm, Bernard L. Madoff Investment Securities, the lawsuit said.

Steven R. Schlesinger, Samuels' lawyer, said Wednesday Peter Madoff had a fiduciary duty to protect the money.

Investigators say food tracing system full of gaps

WASHINGTON (AP)—Government investigators testing the nation’s food tracing system were able to follow only five out of 40 foods all the way through the supply chain, according to a report to be released Thursday.

The ability to trace food is a critical part of investigations into outbreaks of food-borne illness and would be crucial in a bioterrorism attack. Food companies are required by federal law to keep records that would allow investigators to follow suspect foods one step back and one step forward in the supply chain.

But an investigation by the Health and Human Services inspector general’s office found that the records many companies keep are not detailed enough. And one-quarter of the company managers were totally unaware of the record keeping requirements.

“The food safety regulatory structure lacks an adequate traceability system,” said Rep. Rosa DeLauro, D-Conn., who requested the investigation. “Traceability is a critical tool in our ability to identify the source of a food-borne illness outbreak. Trace-back will be a critical part of food safety reform in this Congress.”

In the test, government investigators bought 40 food items, including bottled water, eggs, oatmeal, tomatoes, fruit juice and yogurt. They then attempted to trace the items back from the retailer to the source.

They were only able to fully trace 12.5 percent of the items.

For 31 of the 40, investigators said they were able to identify the facilities that most likely handled the products.

And in the case of four items—10 percent of the total—investigators were unable to identify the facilities than handled them.

Problems with tracing foods drew attention last summer after investigators from the Food and Drug Administration struggled for weeks to identify the cause of a salmonella outbreak initially blamed on tomatoes. No contaminated tomatoes were found, but the outbreak strain eventually was discovered in hot peppers from Mexico.

The inspector general’s report said most facilities do not keep records with specific lot numbers that would facilitate the tracing of foods.

F-22 crashes in California desert near air base
EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP)—One of the Air Force’s top-of-the-line F-22 fighter jets crashed Wednesday in the high desert of Southern California. There was no immediate word on whether the pilot ejected. The F-22A Raptor crashed 35 miles northeast of Edwards Air Force Base, Pentagon spokesman Gary Strassburg said. The Bureau of Land Management identifies the area as Harper Dry Lake, a vast and empty expanse of sometimes marshy flat land. Rescue crews were at the site in the afternoon but there was no information on the status of the pilot, said Lt. Col. Karen Platt, an Air Force spokeswoman at the Pentagon. The crash occurred at 10 a.m., said Airman 1st Class William O’Brien, a spokesman at Edwards.

Chaos and clashes undermine help for octuplets mom
LOS ANGELES (AP)—The list of people octuplets mother Nadya Suleman has alienated from her chaotic life grows by the day: A number of public relations handlers have parted ways and Suleman fired a group of nurses providing charity care. Despite providing good theater on stages from the “Dr. Phil” show to Web sites, her apparent attempt to go it alone raises a larger question of how the unemployed, divorced, single mother is going to bring up 14 children. While it’s unclear whether Suleman can’t play well with others or if she’s a victim of a situation beyond her control, former members of her inner circle are lashing out. “This woman does not care for these kids, she’s in this for the media, for the paparazzi,” nurse Linda West-Conforti told Dr. Phil McGraw on his TV talk show Wednesday.

Fewer than 10 pct. of blind Americans can read Braille

BALTIMORE (AP)—Jordan Gilmer has a degenerative condition that eventually will leave him completely blind. But as a child, his teachers did not emphasize Braille, the system of reading in which a series of raised dots signify letters of the alphabet.

Instead, they insisted he use what little vision he had to read print. By the third grade, he was falling behind in his schoolwork.

“They gave him Braille instruction, but they didn’t tell us how to get Braille books, and they didn’t want him using it during the day,” said Jordan’s mother, Carrie Gilmer of Minneapolis. Teachers said Braille would be “a thing he uses way off in the far distant future, and don’t worry about it.”

That experience is common: Fewer than 10 percent of the 1.3 million legally blind people in the United States read Braille, and just 10 percent of blind children are learning it, according to a report to be released Thursday by the National Federation of the Blind.

By comparison, at the height of its use in the 1950s, more than half the nation’s blind children were learning Braille. Today Braille is considered by many to be too difficult, too outdated, a last resort.

Instead, teachers ask students to rely on audio texts, voice-recognition software or other technology. And teachers who know Braille often must shuttle between schools, resulting in haphazard instruction, the report says.

“You can find good teachers of the blind in America, but you can’t find good programs,” said Marc Maurer, the group’s president. “There is not a commitment to this population that is at all significant almost anywhere.”

Reid open to fast-tracking health care overhaul bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—Majority Leader Harry Reid indicated Wednesday he’s willing to move sweeping health care legislation through the Senate with a procedural maneuver that would block a GOP filibuster. The prospect of the controversial tactic has already ignited Republicans’ ire, and key Senate Democratic chairmen have said they don’t want to do it.

Reid, D-Nev., took a different position on a conference call with reporters.

“I think it’s something we need to consider,” Reid said.

At issue is a so-called reconciliation bill, which could pass with a simple majority of 51 votes and without Democrats fearing a GOP filibuster. Democrats would struggle to gather 60 votes needed to break a filibuster for something as complex as a plan to meet President Barack Obama’s goal of overhauling the nation’s health care system to cover 48 million uninsured Americans.

Revising health care via reconciliation has been viewed favorably by House Democrats. The House Budget Committee included language providing for the method in its annual budget resolution released Wednesday. Reconciliation is not favored by Senate Budget Committee Chairman Kent Conrad, D-N.D., and was not part of his committee’s plan.

Clinton: US shares blame for Mexican drug wars

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said Wednesday that America’s “insatiable” demand for illegal drugs and its inability to stop weapons from being smuggled into Mexico are fueling an alarming spike in violence along the U.S.-Mexican border. Clinton said the United States shares responsibility with Mexico for dealing with the violence and that the Obama administration will work with Mexican authorities to improve security on both sides of the border. President Barack Obama himself said Tuesday that he wanted the U.S. to do more to prevent guns and cash from illicit drug sales from flowing across the border into Mexico. But Clinton’s remarks appeared more forceful in recognizing the U.S. share of the blame. In the past, particularly under the Bush administration, Mexican official have complained that Washington never acknowledged the extent that the U.S. demand for drugs and weapons smuggling fuels the violence. “I feel very strongly we have a co-responsibility,” Clinton told reporters accompanying her to Mexico City a day after the Obama administration said it would send more money, technology and manpower to secure the Southwestern frontier and help Mexico battle the cartels. “Our insatiable demand for illegal drugs fuels the drug trade,” she said. “Our inability to prevent weapons from being illegally smuggled across the border to arm these criminals causes the deaths of police officers, soldiers and civilians.” Criminals are outgunning law enforcement officials, she said, referring to guns and military-style equipment like night vision goggles and body armor that the cartels are smuggling into Mexico from the United States. “Clearly, what we have been doing has not worked and it is unfair for our incapacity ... to be creating a situation where people are holding the Mexican government and people responsible,” she said. “That’s not right.” Clinton said she would repeat her acknowledgment as loudly and as often as needed during her two-day visit to Mexico City and the northern city of Monterrey during which she will brief Mexican officials on U.S. plans for the border and counter-narcotics aid to Mexico. In her discussions, Clinton plans to stress Obama’s commitment and encourage Mexico can President Felipe Calderon and his top aides to boost efforts to combat rampant corruption by promoting police and judicial reform, according to senior U.S. officials. Just hours before she arrived, the Mexican army announced it had captured one of the country’s most-wanted smugglers, a man accused of controlling the flow of drugs through Monterrey for the powerful Beltran-Leyva cartel. Clinton will visit Monterrey on Thursday.

Filipino Red Cross hostage: We are afraid for our lives

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—One of three Red Cross workers held by Muslim militants said she feared for her life after captors set a deadline to behead one of them and Philippine troops rejected a demand to pull out of southern jungles. “Time is running out,” Filipino Mary Jean Lacaba said in a cell phone interview with ABS-CBN television late Wednesday, as she appealed to the Philippine government to act quickly to end the 2 1/2-month-old hostage crisis. Lacaba said she and her two European colleagues from the International Committee of the Red Cross—Swiss Andreas Notter and Italian Eugenio Vagni—were afraid for their lives “every minute, every second because we don’t know when a firefight will suddenly start.” Their ordeal entered a critical stage this week after Abu Sayyaf commander Albader Parad threatened to behead one of the hostages if troops did not withdraw from the group’s jungle stronghold near Indanan town on Jolo island. Jolo Gov. Abdusakur Tan said the militants told a government emissary that the deadline for the troops to withdraw to Jolo town, near Indanan, is Tuesday. But the military swiftly rejected the ultimatum, saying the gunmen could not be trusted.

Australia’s Rudd to America: China is not an enemy

SYDNEY (AP)—Australia Prime Minister Kevin Rudd has urged Americans not to view China as an enemy but as a country offering huge economic opportunities, even though its leaders have “done some bad things in the past.” Rudd was speaking during a visit to Washington, where the Mandarin-speaking former diplomat has been welcomed as an expert on China as well as a close ally of the United States.

Rudd was asked on the influential PBS television program “The NewsHour With Jim Lehrer” whether Americans should view China as an ally, an enemy, or some other way. “I think China represents a huge opportunity for us all for the 21st century,” Rudd replied, noting the country had a big part to play as “the center of global economic gravity” shifts toward the Asia Pacific region.

WORLD BRIEFS

Officials: Suicide attack kills 11 in NW Pakistan
DERA ISMAIL KHAN, Pakistan (AP)—A suicide bomber struck a restaurant on volatile northwest Pakistan on Thursday, killing at least 11 people including militants opposed to the country’s top Taliban commander, intelligence officials said. Pockets of northwest Pakistan are strongholds for Taliban, al-Qaida and other militant groups, not all of whom get along. Even as Pakistan has battled the extremists and the U.S. has carried out dozens of missile attacks against the militants—including a suspected American strike that killed eight Wednesday—the armed groups have also attacked one another. The attack Thursday morning occurred just outside the South Waziristan tribal region near the town of Tank at a roadside restaurant where some two dozen militants loyal to Turkistan Bittani were eating, two intelligence officials told The Associated Press. UN says little progress made on key Gaza issues

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—The U.N.’s political chief says he is worried that very little progress has been made in cementing a cease-fire in the Gaza Strip and opening border crossings to rebuild the devastated Palestinian territory. Two months after Israel and Gaza’s Hamas rulers declared unilateral cease-fires, Undersecretary-General for Political Affairs B. Lynn Pascoe told the U.N. Security Council on Wednesday that there has also been little progress on preventing illicit arms trafficking into the coastal territory and reconciling the rival Palestinian factions. He said the key impediment is “the intolerable situation at Gaza’s crossings.”

Man allegedly tries to steal his ‘dream car’
ELGIN, Ill. (AP)—Police say Carliss Henderson was overjoyed when he found his dream car—a red Nissan Altima with a push-button ignition. The only catch? It was locked up in an auto dealership. According to police, around midnight Sunday, Henderson saw his dream car on the showroom floor of McGrath Nissan. They say he broke into the dealership and started the car, but couldn’t find a way to get it out of the building. Angered, the 21-year-old picked up a chair and threw it at the showroom window directly behind the 2009 car, reports said. But when he put the car into reverse and tried driving backward through the broken window, the car wouldn’t move, police said.

Man plays Madoff’s prison number and wins $1,500
NEW YORK (AP)—Wall Street swindler Bernard Madoff is a lucky charm for one New York City construction worker. Queens resident Ralph Amendolario said he saw Madoff’s prison number in a newspaper and had a good feeling so he played the last three digits of it in the state lottery’s Numbers game. It hit March 15, paying $1,500. Lottery officials say other people had the same idea. The number combination 0-5-4 produced 501 winning tickets the Sunday after Madoff’s guilty plea, up from 120 winners the previous day. Madoff’s prison registration number is 61727-054. A lottery spokeswoman says people often play numbers they see on the news. So many people played the flight number of a jet that landed safely in the Hudson River that the lottery had to halt sales.

Man gets 90 days in jail in vacuum sex act case
SAGINAW, Mich. (AP)—A man who police said was arrested for performing a sex act with a car wash vacuum was sentenced to 90 days in jail on Wednesday and ordered to submit to drug testing. The 29-year-old man pleaded no contest to indecent exposure last month. Police said the man was arrested after a resident called officers early on Oct. 16 to report suspicious activity at a car wash in Thomas Township, about 90 miles northwest of Detroit.

Police say woman used fake ID to get fake breasts
HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. (AP)—Police are seeking a woman they said used a false identity to get breast implants and liposuction, then skipped town. Huntington Beach police said Monday that a 30-year-old woman opened a line of credit in someone else’s name in September 2008 and had the procedures worth more than $12,000 performed at the Pacific Center For Plastic Surgery. Employees said she never returned for follow-up visits. The woman turned herself in Tuesday and was released on $20,000 bail.

Fake Justice accused of performing weddings
SEDONA, Ariz. (AP)—Sheriff’s officials in Arizona say a man impersonated an elected justice of the peace and performed several weddings whose legality are now in doubt. Yavapai County Sheriff’s spokesman Dwight D’Evelyn says 41-year-old Allen Elfman was arrested Tuesday on charges of fraud, forgery, criminal impersonation, impersonating a public servant and tampering with a public record. D’Evelyn says a county court administrator brought the case to the attention of the county attorney’s office. Sheriff’s detectives have found at least four couples who were married by Elfman.

Needy Seattle area dogs receiving kibble windfall
SEATTLE (AP)—A mountain of dog food has proven a bit of a headache for the Port of Seattle. Port officials bought 12.7 tons of kibble in June to test new baggage conveyor systems at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport. In October, the 1,600 bags were stored in a warehouse, with snowstorms keeping it there longer than anticipated. On Tuesday, port officials voted to donate the dog food to two animal shelters, but it was too much for the outlets in Seattle and King County to store. So the shelters are passing on most of it to food banks for the dogs of people in need.

HELP FILE

Decoding license agreements

By ROB PEGORARO

(C) 2009, THE WASHINGTON POST

Q Do you have advice about how to make sense of the terms of service and license agreements we have to accept before joining a Web site or installing a program? They seem to be total gibberish.

A These documents can go for thousands of words, but they usually come in a form that permits selective skimming to find the parts that might cause you trouble.

The first thing to do is to find the license or terms of use. On a Web site, look at the bottom of the home page for a link titled "terms," "agreement," "license" or "policy." In a program, try searching for the same words in its help file.

Then look over the section headings for the standard-issue boilerplate you can ignore. For example, nearly every consumer program or Web site's license includes a "disclaimer of warranty," relieving it of any obligation to function as advertised. You can also skip over sections such as "Limitation of liability" and "Export controls" (which tend to fill the tail end of license documents and run in all capital letters).

The stuff to watch out for generally comes higher up. Look for headings like "Use" and "Usage" to discover that, for instance, Microsoft Word 2007 allows you to install it on two computers. An "Upgrades" paragraph can reveal that a program will install new updates automatically. A "Territory" section can state that you can't use a Web site's services outside the United States. "Disputes" or "Arbitration" clauses can require you to give up any right to sue and instead accept binding arbitration.

Finally, never skip the "Privacy" section, even if it refers you to a separate document.

A free Windows program called EULalyzer (javacoolsoftware.com/eulalyzer.html) can analyze the text of a license agreement and flag "interesting" passages for you, although it can still miss noteworthy details.

'Monsters vs. Aliens' creates another dimension

LOS ANGELES (AP)—"Monsters vs. Aliens" opens with an old 3-D gag: A ball bounces directly into the audience, causing moviegoers to instinctively scoot back in their seats. But the resemblance to old-fashioned 3-D ends there.

The film, in theaters Friday, relies on entirely new technology—much of it developed during production—to lend depth to an epic battle in outer space and drama to the collapse of the Golden Gate bridge as four modern monsters fight to save Earth from alien invasion.

"We can dial in the (3-D) to a degree that was unthinkable even 10 years ago," said the stereoscopic supervisor at DreamWorks, who legally changed his name 12 years ago to Phil Captain 3D McNally (it appears on his driver's license as Captain IIID.)

"What I'm hoping people will see in 'Monsters vs. Aliens' for the first time is stereoscopic filmmaking that feels completely integrated into the flow of the story."

Unlike most 3-D movies, which are conceived and shot in two dimensions and then rendered later, the film was made start to finish in three dimensions, with directors watching daily takes through 3-D glasses.

Producer Lisa Stewart said it made sense for the story, which she characterized as "an homage to the 1950s and '60s monster horror movies where 3-D really first came into the fore." The film follows Susan (voiced by Reese Witherspoon), who's transformed into the 49-foot-tall Ginormica after she gets hit by a meteor on her wedding day. When aliens attack the planet, it's up to Ginormica and her fellow monsters—a gelatinous blob named B.O.B. (Seth Rogen), a mad scientist called Dr. Cockroach (Hugh Laurie) and a fishape known as the Missing Link (Will Arnett)—to save the world.

The characters, concepts and landscapes lent themselves to three-dimensional exploration. But there were concerns about the technology. What were its limitations? Would filmmakers be reduced to a series of coming-right-at-you sight gags?

"There was an initial fear that it was going to be a gimmick like it was in the '50s, where we're suddenly going to be asked to throw a bunch of stuff out through the screen," Stewart said. "But that was not at all what he wanted to do. ... It was about how can we use this (technology) to tell the story that we're already telling, how can we use it to our advantage."

AP

In this film publicity still released by DreamWorks Animation LLC, Ginormica, voiced by Reese Witherspoon, powers through the atmosphere in a scene from DreamWorks Animation's 3D film, "Monsters vs. Aliens."

Study: Technology can overwhelm even 20-somethings

WASHINGTON (AP)—They are comfortable with gadgets, yet shudder sometimes as the cell phone rings.

This group—primarily male and in their late 20s—is called the "Ambivalent Networkers" in a study released Wednesday by the Pew Internet and American Life Project. Pew found this group notable because its members have lived with the Internet and other technologies for much of their lives.

In the study, Pew examined American adults' gadgets and services, their activities and their attitudes toward technology. About 60 percent of the overall respondents didn't have significant attachments to mobile devices, either because they didn't have such gadgets or because they were fine with desktop PCs.

But nearly 40 percent did say they were glued to their mobile devices. And the Ambivalent Networkers make up a fifth of that group.

"They're the most active on social networks and using mobile devices for a range of activities, yet they think it's a good idea to take a break," said John Horrigan, Pew's associate director for research. "They are not thrilled about all that's available."

These people aren't willing to go off the grid, either, said Lee Rainie, Pew's director. Their friends, family and co-workers are all connected by technology, and they fear they'd miss out if they check out.

Technology, to them, "feels like an obligation," Rainie said.

Another one-fifth of the mobile-attached users feel quite differently. These people, according to Pew, are the "Digital Collaborators." They not only are comfortable with technology, but they also are enthusiastic. They also tend to be male, but in their late 30s.

Horrigan said Digital Collaborators more likely have elevated into jobs that require collaboration across distance.

US group re-creates Nazi death camp orchestra

NEW YORK (AP)—When Gustav Mahler's niece greeted new arrivals at a Nazi death camp, she knew that any woman who stepped off the train with a musical instrument had a chance to live. Women in Alma Rose's orchestra were forced to entertain SS officers at the Birkenau concentration camp. All the women survived—except Rose.

Now, an American chorus and orchestra is paying tribute to those musicians with concerts in the U.S. and Germany titled "Music in Desperate Times: Remembering The Women's Orchestra of Birkenau."

On Saturday, Ars Choralis will play at Manhattan's Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine, whose Episcopal bishop had spoken against the persecution of Jews in Europe already in 1933.

During the 18 months the Birkenau orchestra existed, its musicians played pieces the German officers loved—Beethoven symphonies, Puccini arias, Chopin and Strauss waltzes. The women also had to play marches for emaciated, often sick prisoners as they struggled to walk to their forced labor jobs.

All around was death—people perishing outdoors, or in filthy barracks and gas chambers. More than 1 million disappeared in this place of horror.

When the Vienna-born Rose (pronounced roh-ZAY) was sent to the camp, the SS guards realized she was Mahler's relative and had conducted an all-women's orchestra. She was asked to form one at Birkenau, for the pleasure of the Nazis.

"As the women came off transport trains, if they had a guitar, a violin, a recorder or a mandolin, they were put aside," said Alice Radosh, who helped organize the Ars Choralis concerts. "People would hear classical music—and think, 'How bad could this be?'"

The truth was, "we played with tears in our eyes and guns at our backs," Radosh quoted accordion player Esther Bejarano as saying after the war.

They were still expected to play well—or face possible death.

"At Birkenau, music was indeed the best and worst of things," wrote the late Fania Fenelon, a cabaret singer from Paris who wrote the book "Playing for Time," which was turned into a television movie starring Vanessa Redgrave.

"The best because it filled in time and brought us oblivion, like a drug; we emerged from it deadened, exhausted," Fenelon said, "and the worst because our public consisted of the assassins and the victims, and in the hand of the assassins, it was almost as though we too were made executioners."

With the orchestra, Rose saved more than 50 women, including Fenelon, who died in 1983; three are still alive.

Exactly what killed the great composer's niece remains a mystery. A document signed by Josef Mengele on April 4, 1944, shows that the Nazi SS physician who performed experiments on prisoners was summoned to a special private room where Rose lay, slipping in and out of consciousness from an undiagnosed illness. Mengele signed a form requesting medical tests for meningitis and pneumonia that came out negative.

Rose died the next day, her arms twisted in seizures. She was respectfully laid out atop a white cloth, with floral tributes sent by SS officers, according to Fenelon's book.

Mourners filing by included her musicians and the orchestra's protector, Maria Mandel, the camp's sadistic chief of female wardens. Mandel was a fan of classical music and of the 37-year-old conductor, whom she mourned openly, according to the 2000 biography "Alma Rose, Vienna to Auschwitz" by Richard Newman.

In October 1944, the Jewish women in the orchestra were evacuated by cattle car to the Bergen-Belsen camp in Germany where Anne Frank died, according to Newman's book. The non-Jews were sent from Birkenau to neighboring Auschwitz.

Although there was no chorus at Birkenau, the 48-voice Ars Choralis serves as a kind of "Greek chorus," commenting on the human tragedy six decades ago at the death camp in Poland.

At Birkenau, the musicians performed in lavender scarves and white blouses, as do members of the Ars Choralis ensemble. Ars Choralis includes the usual violin, cello, flute and percussion, plus mandolin, accordion and recorder.

The upcoming program will combine music of Beethoven, Mendelssohn and Puccini with words read from the wartime musicians' memoirs, as well as the "Song of Faith," a Yiddish piece sung in camps, Gyorgy Ligeti's "Solitude," and Ben Steinberg's "Shalom Rav," a peace prayer.

"This is amazingly uplifting music," Radosh said.

The not-for-profit Ars Choralis is itself a story, of how a small town in upstate New York—Woodstock—recruited singers representing a cross-section of the community, from teachers and nurses to gardeners and contractors. The orchestra and soloists are hired professionals.

Party in Dubai may spell trouble for Snipes

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP)—Prosecutors in Florida want a judge to restrict actor Wesley Snipes' international travel because they say he attended a lavish party in Dubai while free on bond as he appeals a tax conviction.

Snipes attended the $20 million party last November for the opening of the $1.5 billion Atlantis Hotel resort, U.S. attorneys in Ocala, Fla., said in court filings Tuesday.

A jury convicted the action star last year of three counts of willfully failing to file his income taxes. Snipes is free on bond while he appeals the convictions and his three-year prison sentence to the 11th Circuit Court in Atlanta.

A federal judge last year said Snipes could travel only to London and Bangkok for work on the movies "Gallowalker" and "Chasing the Dragon."

Federal prosecutors said Snipes traveled 2,000 miles from Thailand to Dubai to attend the party.

"Defendant Snipes abused the Court's trust, and did so in a very public way," the U.S. Attorney's Office said in its motion. "For that reason alone, the Court should deny his current request for international travel."

The federal prosecutors also asked that Snipes' bond be revoked pending the appeal.

The motion came in response to a request by Snipes to travel in April to Africa for a reshoot of several scenes from "Gallowalker." The actor also asked permission to go to Italy from May to August to film another movie, "Game of Death."

"It is essential that Mr. Snipes complete this project to satisfy his civil tax liabilities and provide for his family," his attorneys said in the filing.

Snipes' attorney, Daniel Meachum, declined comment.

Adam Lambert hits all the right notes on 'Idol'

NEW YORK (AP)—Adam Lambert showed his softer side on "American Idol," earning a standing ovation for his smooth performance of "The Tracks of My Tears."

Guest mentor Smokey Robinson, who originally performed the classic song with the Miracles, rose to his feet after watching the 26-year-old theater actor hit all the right notes during Wednesday's Motown-themed installment of the "Fox" singing competition.

Lambert, who's from Los Angeles, ditched his rocker duds for a sleek silver suit and smoothed his black hair back into an Elvis-style pompadour.

Judge Simon Cowell said

Lambert delivered the night's best performance and became a star in his eyes. Fellow judge Kara Dioguardi agreed, saying Lambert showed "true artistry."

The four judges were also equally impressed by the vocal stylings of Allison Iraheta, Matt Giraud and Kris Allen. Cowell liked Allen's cover of "How Sweet It Is" but said the 23-year-old married heartthrob from Conway, Ark., needs to show more swagger and confidence.

Lil Rounds and Danny Gokey scored mixed reviews for their respective renditions of "Heat Wave" and "Get Ready." Cowell told Rounds, 24, of Memphis, Tenn., she'd missed a potential "Idol"-defining "moment" by picking the wrong song (he'd rather hear the soul singer belt "I Heard It Through The Grapevine"). But the cranky judge had harsher words for Gokey, deeming the 28-year-old crowd pleaser "clumsy and amateurish."

Michael Sarver and Megan Joy had a tougher time on stage. Judges slammed Sarver's cover of "Ain't Too Proud To Beg." Even sugary-sweet Paula Abdul chimed in, comparing the 27-year-old oil rig worker from Jasper, Texas, to an old-school Vegas lounge act.

Joy, 23, of Sandy, Utah, was targeted for her shaky take on "For Once in My Life." Cowell called Joy's performance "horrible" while Randy Jackson declared it a "train wreck" and "mad crazy."

One of the 10 finalists will be sent packing on Thursday's elimination show—unless judges act on the new rule that allows them to save a favorite contestant they feel has been unfairly booted by voting viewers.

Armed man arrested at 'DWTS' studio

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A restraining order has been issued against a man authorities say tried to break onto the set of "Dancing With the Stars" to meet Shawn Johnson.

Court records show an order was issued against Robert O'Ryan, who was arrested by Los Angeles police on Tuesday. According to documents that accompanied the restraining order application, O'Ryan was stopped by security at CBS Studios, where "Dancing With the Stars" is produced, after he jumped on a fence on Monday afternoon.

Police later searched his car and found two guns and duct tape, according to the documents.

A police spokeswoman said she did not have any more details about the arrest.

Johnson, 17, is a gold medalist in gymnastics, and one of the celebrity contestants on ABC's "Dancing With the Stars."

She is "in fear of her life," her parent's attorney wrote in a restraining order application.

Her parents requested and were granted the restraining order on Wednesday. A hearing on whether to grant a lengthy restraining order will be held on April 14.

O'Ryan, 34, is being held on $35,000 bail on suspicion of carrying a loaded firearm in public.

Court records do not indicate whether he has a lawyer.

The records state that he told security guards and police that he packed up all his belongings and traveled to California from Florida in the hopes of being with Johnson.

A report by security guards at CBS Studios states that O'Ryan was carrying an expired concealed weapons permit.

Piven arbitration hearings set for June 8-9

NEW YORK (AP)—The dispute between the Broadway producers of "Speed-the-Plow" and Jeremy Piven is officially on to its next act—arbitration.

In a statement, the show's producers said Wednesday the case will be heard June 8-9 in New York by George Nicolau, a professional arbiter. It follows a grievance hearing held last month at Actors' Equity Association in which a committee composed of five Equity members and five members of The Broadway League, which represents the producers, did not resolve the dispute.

Piven abruptly left the revival of the David Mamet play in December after his doctor said he was suffering from mercury poisoning after eating too much fish over a lengthy period of time.

The producers said in a statement that they were preparing their case, and "in connection with that, have requested a wide range of relevant information from Mr. Piven relating to his claims that an alleged illness required him to leave the show."

Among the information requested, the statement said, were "medical records and documentation of Mr. Piven's activities both during and after the run of the show."

Woman caring for dying friend begins to question her loyalty

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE

DEAR ABBY: I have known "Gloria" for two years. We met at work, hit it off immediately and became close friends. I love her dearly, and I'm devastated by what's happening to her. Gloria is dying of AIDS and now has a rare brain infection that has caused her to lose most of her faculties. She goes in and out of dementia, and her prognosis is two months.

Dear Abby

I have been by Gloria's side so frequently that her family has "adopted" me. I help with her care and am the only one of her friends and co-workers who has visited since she took this turn.

My problem is, since I have been around Gloria's family, I have learned that nearly everything she has ever told me is untrue. She has flat-out lied about many things—big and small—that weren't even necessary to lie about. I feel like I don't know my friend at all and never did.

As sad as I am to see Gloria suffering and dying, I am hurt and angry that I was repeatedly deceived by someone I thought was my friend. I keep telling myself it shouldn't matter now, but the more the truth comes out, the harder it is for me to go over there and help.

How can I get past this, forgive Gloria and get back to the business of helping her in her final weeks?

WOUNDED IN WASHINGTON, D.C.

DEAR WOUNDED: People lie for many reasons. Some of them do it because they are ashamed to tell the truth. Others lie out of fear or to gain an advantage, and some people do it because they can't help themselves. But somewhere in the tapestry of lies that this poor woman wove is a part of her authentic self. It is the part that made you identify with her in the first place.

What you are doing for Gloria now is both generous and emotionally wrenching. You do not deserve the "payoff" for your efforts to be spending the rest of your life resenting her for her shortcomings. You are giving her one of the most important gifts a person can give to another, but it is one that you are also giving to yourself. If you remember that, you will have no regrets.

■ ■ ■ ■

DEAR ABBY: My mother is a widow living on a fixed income. From time to time various relatives have moved in with her. They offer limited financial assistance, but none appear inclined to keep the house in good repair.

I have gone beyond my financial limits to help Mama with emergencies, such as paying the light bill and making repairs to her house. My husband and I also clean up and do yard work over there. I am not an only child, but my siblings do not feel inclined to help out.

Yesterday, Mama again asked me for financial help to make repairs to the house. Did I mention there are four other people living there? While I never resent helping my mother, I sometimes do resent struggling to pay for upkeep and repairs to a home while other able-bodied adults living there benefit from my hard work. They are freeloading off my generosity.

Should I continue paying for my mother's house and mine? I have offered several times to let her move in with me, but she can't bear to give up her home.

FEELING USED IN GEORGIA

DEAR FEELING USED: It's time for you to have a heart-to-heart talk with your mother and your siblings and explain that you are no longer willing to shoulder this responsibility all by yourself. Tell her that if she's going to receive further help from you, she must either inform her "houseguests" they must pony up and contribute financially and with the chores, or allow you to tell them on her behalf. You are all adults, and it's time that everyone started acting like it. Please understand that unless you are willing to draw the line, nothing will change.

Mabius just not that into 'Ugly Betty' pairing

NEW YORK (AP)—Love is in the air this season on "Ugly Betty."

If you read message boards and fan Web sites, many viewers of the ABC comedy are rooting for what may seem an unlikely couple: Betty and her ladies man boss, Daniel Meade.

There are even montages of their scenes together set to romantic music on YouTube.

Despite the hype, Eric Mabius, who plays Meade, says the hookup won't happen if he has anything to say about it. "That would be the equivalent of us jumping the shark," the 37-year-old says.

Betty and her playboy boss have gotten romantic in other international versions of the show and Mabius says it's been the swan song for those productions.

"In all the other series ... they get married and the show ends! I'm not too excited about that idea!"

Versions of the show have aired in more than one dozen countries worldwide.

"Ugly Betty," now in its third season, airs Thursdays at 8 p.m. EDT on ABC.

Merengue star Crespo accused of sex act on plane

MIAMI (AP)—Merengue star Elvis Crespo is being investigated after a woman said she saw him performing a sex act on an airplane en route from Houston to Miami, according to Miami-Dade County police.

The Grammy winner was masturbating in view of other passengers Thursday, prompting the plane's captain to radio the Miami International Airport's air traffic control tower, the police report said.

Officers interviewed Crespo upon his arrival but did not arrest him. No charges have been filed.

When asked by police at the airport about the accusation, the 37-year-old Puerto Rican singer said: "I don't recall doing that."

A message left by The Associated Press Wednesday for his publicist, Mayna Ne-varez, was not immediately returned.

Because the incident took place over U.S. air space, the FBI is also investigating. Messages left for the FBI office in Miami also were not immediately returned.

According to the police report, 52-year-old Patricia Perea of Canyon Gate, Texas, told police she was sitting next to the singer of the hit song "Suavemente." She said that about 15 minutes after the plane left Houston, Crespo covered himself with a blanket and began to masturbate, then exposed himself.

Oscars: 82nd annual awards show to air March 7

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)—The Oscars will be presented a little later next year.

The 82nd Annual Academy Awards will air live on ABC from the Kodak Theatre in Los Angeles on March 7 to avoid coinciding with the Winter Olympics, said Leslie Unger, a spokeswoman for the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

The 2010 Winter Games are scheduled

Feb. 12-28.

This year's Oscars telecast, hosted by Hugh Jackman, aired Feb. 22.

For many years, until 2004, the awards ceremony was held at the end of March.

"It has been in February since then, except for one year, in 2006, where the circumstances were the same as next year, to not coincide with the closing ceremonies of the Winter Olympics," Unger said Wednesday.

Nominations ballots will be mailed to members Dec. 28 and nominations polls will close Jan. 23.

Nominations will be announced Feb. 2. "In terms of the nominating process, that puts another week in the schedule for members to see movies," Unger said.

ENTERTAINMENT TIDBITS

People: Family friend says Richardson was donor

LOS ANGELES (AP)—People.com is reporting that Natasha Richardson's family has donated the actress's organs to save other patients' lives. Citing a "family friend" it did not name, the celebrity Web site said Richardson's family had requested her organs be donated after she was taken off life support last week. The report did not say whether any patient had received them. Alan Nierob, publicist for Richardson's husband Liam Neeson, said he had no information on the matter. Richardson died March 18 of a head injury that caused bleeding on the brain after a fall during a beginners' ski lesson in Montreal two days before. She was buried at a private ceremony in upstate New York over the weekend.

Actress who played Winnie Cooper marries composer

NEW YORK (AP)—The actress who played Winnie Cooper on "The Wonder Years" has gotten married. Danica McKellar married composer Mike Verta in a ceremony Sunday in the California seaside town La Jolla. McKellar's publicist confirmed marriage on Wednesday. It was first reported by People magazine. The 34-year-old actress and the 36-year-old Verta began dating in 2001 and were engaged last summer. McKellar last starred in the 2008 Sci-Fi Channel movie "Heatstroke," for which Verta composed the score. After studying mathematics at UCLA, McKellar wrote two books, "Math Doesn't Suck" and "Kiss My Math." She famously played the elusive young love interest on "The Wonder Years," which aired on ABC from 1988 to 1993.

'CSI' actress Marg Helgenberger files for divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP)—"CSI" star Marg Helgenberger has filed for divorce from her husband, fellow actor and Screen Actors Guild President Alan Rosenberg. She filed her petition Tuesday in Los Angeles, citing irreconcilable differences. The couple got married in 1989 and have a son together. The 50-year-old Helgenberger plays Catherine Willows on CBS' highly rated drama, "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation." She won a best supporting actress Emmy in 1990 for the series "China Beach." The 58-year-old Rosenberg was a regular on the TV series "LA Law" and "The Guardian," and received an Emmy nomination for a guest role on "ER." He is the current president of SAG, which remains embroiled in contract negotiations with Hollywood producers over a new contract for actors.

Danger zone for 'Grey's Anatomy' doctor

NEW YORK (AP)—It's a close call for someone on "Grey's Anatomy" Thursday night. Spoiler alert: Stop here if you want to be surprised when the show airs on ABC. For those who can't stand the suspense: a lethal secret is revealed when the show's Dr. Owen Hunt tries to strangle his love interest, Cristina Yang, while they're both sleeping at the hospital. Other doctors intervene to save Yang, who's played by Sandra Oh. Kevin McKidd, who portrays Hunt, said that while his character was in Iraq, his platoon of surgeons came under attack and "he's the only survivor." There have been hints that Hunt suffered from Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. But until Thursday's episode, he hasn't disclosed the wartime injury to people at the hospital and he had cut off ties with people he knew before. "This is the catalyst," McKidd said, "that is going to push Owen to realize he's hit rock bottom" and needs professional help.

3 cops injured in shootout at Luciano's home

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP)—Police say three patrolmen were injured during a shootout with a fugitive holed up inside reggae singer Luciano's home. A police statement says the hourlong standoff ended with the gunman, Andrew Senior, being killed at the Grammy-nominated singer's estate in the capital, Kingston. Two of the officers were in critical condition after Wednesday's shooting. Police say the Rastafarian singer, whose real name is Jephther McClymont, was questioned but has not been charged with harboring a fugitive. Senior was a suspect in several killings. The 44-year-old Luciano is best known for the songs "Lord Give Me Strength" and "It's Me Again, Jah." His 2001 release, "A New Day," earned a Grammy nomination for best reggae album.

REQUEST FOR QUALIFICATIONS

FOR PROVISION OF ENGINEERING SERVICES

RFQ09-GOV-062

Garapan Tourist District Storm Water Conceptual Study

Governor Benigno R. Fitial and Lt. Governor Timothy P. Villagomez through the Office of Capital Improvement (collectively, "Commonwealth") are soliciting Statements of Qualifications for the provision of civil engineering services for the conceptual examination of alternative methods to resolve the Garapan Tourist District Storm Water Issues.

The Commonwealth seeks engineering services to identify and analyze the various alternatives for control of pollutants being discharged onto the beaches from the Garapan Tourist District. Analysis should begin with a review of existing data and previous analysis and build upon this base. Specifically, previous work entitled "Field Investigations and Conceptual Alternative Development" by the engineering firm of Winzler & Kelly (November 2004) should be consulted. Additional documentation should be reviewed in order to quantify and qualify storm water in the Garapan Tourist District. Information gained from examination of existing data should then be used to identify and provide conceptual examination of alternatives for treatment and control of storm water in this area. This examination should identify estimated costs, permitting requirements, and treatment and control parameters. This information will be used by the Commonwealth to make decisions on selection of design. Specific details concerning project requirements are identified in the scope of work.

Interested parties may pick up the applicable scope of work and submittal requirements ("Scope of Work and Submittal Requirements") at the Office of Capital Improvement 1356 Mednilla Ave. Capitol Hill, Saipan, during working hours (7:30 a.m. to 4: 30 p.m. - Monday through Friday, except holidays). Submittal of all qualifications must precisely follow the submittal requirements identified in the Scope of Work and Submittal Requirements. A pre-proposal conference is schedule for this RFQ on March 18, 2009 at 9 a.m. in the Office of Procurement & Supply.

Selection of individuals for the provision of services shall be guided by the Commonwealth Department of Finance Division of Procurement & Supply, Procurement Regulations § 7070-30.3-305. Five copies of qualifications should be submitted to the Commonwealth Division of Procurement & Supply, Lower Base, Saipan, MP 96950 in a sealed envelope marked "Garapan Tourist District Storm Water Study Qualifications, RFQ09-GOV-062"

Qualifications must be received prior to noon of April 13, 2009 ("Closing Date") from individuals or firms residing within the Commonwealth. Individuals or firms residing outside the Commonwealth may receive an additional five (5) calendar days from the Closing Date for receipt of their qualifications, upon filing a notice of intent to submit qualifications ("Notice of Intent") with the Division of Procurement & Supply by 11:00 a.m. local time April 6, 2009. Notice of Intent may be transmitted in any of the following forms: direct delivery; transmitted via facsimile to (670) 664-1515; or via e-mail to procurement@pticom.com; however, the individual or firm transmitting a Notice of Intent bears all risk of proper functioning of equipment. For proposer's located outside the CNMI who have filed a Notice of Intent, all required documents must be postmarked by the U.S. Postal Services or the official government postal service of the foreign country no later than the Closing Date and must be received no later than five calendar days after the Closing Date.

Statements of Qualifications will be evaluated and scored based on the following factors:

1. Proposed technical approach	35%
2. Prior experience in storm water design	20%
3. References	10%
4. Interview	35%

Interviews will be conducted with the individuals who are determined to have the most appropriate qualifications for the needs of the Commonwealth.

This project is funded through grants from the United States Department of Interior, Office of Insular Affairs (OIA) with local matching funds. Contract award is contingent upon approval from DOI.

The Commonwealth reserves the right to reject any or all proposals and to waive any imperfections in any proposal if, in its opinion to do so would be in the best interest of the government. All submitted documents shall become the property of the Commonwealth.

Magic switch: Orlando bounces Boston from 2nd

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP)—Dwight Howard blocked a potential go-ahead layup by Paul Pierce with 3.8 seconds left, and the Orlando Magic clinched their second straight Southeast Division title with an 84-82 win over the Boston Celtics on Wednesday night.

Howard had 24 points and 21 rebounds as the Magic (53-18) bumped Boston (54-19) by percentage points for second in the Eastern Conference behind Cleveland. Orlando remains five games back of Cleveland for the conference lead with 11 games left. The Magic took the division title with Atlanta's loss to San Antonio.

Pierce hit a jumper to cut Orlando's lead to 83-82 with 1:27 left, but the Celtics couldn't make up the difference without Kevin Garnett, who was limited to 16 minutes as Boston continues to work him back in the lineup from a right knee strain. Pierce then missed a 3-pointer at the buzzer that would have won it for Boston.

Rashard Lewis had 21 points, and Hedo Turkoglu added 13 points for the Magic, who nearly blew a 16-point lead before holding on for their fourth straight win and 11th in their past 13 games. The Magic were held to just 14 points in the final period.

Pierce had 26 points, and Ray Allen added 16 points for the Celtics, who snapped their four-game winning streak.

Cavaliers 98, Nets 87

At Cleveland, LeBron James and these Cleveland Cavaliers have risen to the top.

James scored 22 points with 11 assists and made all the right moves in the closing minutes as the too-tough-at-home Cavaliers set a franchise record with their 58th win—and 10th straight—by beating the New Jersey Nets 98-87 on Wednesday night.

With 11 games left in the regular season, the Cavs already have surpassed the club mark of 57 wins shared by the 1988-89 and 1991-92 teams. Also, James joined Hall of Famer Oscar Robertson as the only players in NBA history to post 2,000 points, 500 rebounds and 500 assists in a season at least four times.

Cleveland, which trailed 82-81 with less than 4 minutes left, also improved to an NBA-best 33-1 at home.

Vince Carter scored 20 for the Nets.

Wizards 95, Bobcats 93

At Washington, Antawn Jamison scored 27 points, Nick Young had 23 and short-handed Washington held off Charlotte.

Mike James and Andray Blatche added 15 points each for the Wizards, had only eight players available and rallied from a 20-point deficit.

Gerald Wallace led Charlotte with 21 points and 11 rebounds, but missed a potential tying free throw with 6.5 seconds left.

The biggest key to the outcome: the Bobcats went only 19-for-30 at the foul line.

Spurs 102, Hawks 92

At Atlanta, Tony Parker scored 42 points and San Antonio, playing without Tim Duncan, ended Atlanta's eight-game home winning streak.

Parker enjoyed his second-best scoring total of the season. He set a career high with 55 points at Minnesota on Nov. 5.

Joe Johnson had 30 points, including Atlanta's first 11 points of the fourth quarter, but he had too little help as the Hawks suffered their first loss at Philips Arena since March 1. No other Atlanta player scored in the period until Mike Bibby's 3-pointer with 1:54 remaining and Josh Smith added a jam 30 seconds later to cut the Spurs' lead to 96-90.

Parker, who had 10 assists, answered with six straight points for the Spurs.

Pacers 90, Heat 88

At Indianapolis, Danny Granger scored 28 points and Indiana continued its home-court mastery of cold-shooting Dwyane Wade and Miami.

Wade, the NBA scoring leader at almost 30 points a game, scored 21 but was just 5-of-24 from the field and missed a shot at the buzzer that would have tied it.

Indiana trailed by four early in the fourth but took control with a 13-1 run midway through the quarter and held on for their 17th straight win at home against the Heat. Wade has never won in Conseco Fieldhouse.

Granger had seven points and T.J. Ford six during Indiana's run, and a 3-pointer by Granger gave the Pacers their biggest lead at 90-80 with under 4 minutes remaining.

76ers 96, Timberwolves 88

At Philadelphia, Thaddeus Young scored 29 points and Andre Miller had 15 to lead Philadelphia past Minnesota.

The Sixers are the worst 3-point shooting team in the NBA and hadn't made one all game until the fourth quarter. Andre Iguodala and Royal Ivey hit two apiece in the quarter to open up a double-digit lead and led Philadelphia to its third straight win.

Rodney Carney scored 21 points and Craig Smith had 20 for the Timberwolves, whose new lineup couldn't help them avoid their sixth straight loss.

Raptors 115, Bucks 106

At Toronto, Andrea Bargnani scored 23 points, and Chris Bosh and Jose Calderon had double-doubles to lead the Raptors.

Bosh had 18 points and 14 rebounds, Calderon added 19 points and 11 assists to help the Raptors win consecutive games for the first time since Feb. 22-24. Shawn Marion scored 17 points, Anthony Parker had 15 and Jason Kapono 14.

Toronto made a season-high 12 3-pointers, including six in a game-changing second quarter. Bargnani, Calderon, Kapono and Parker all finished with three 3s.

Richard Jefferson shook off a recent shooting slump, going 10-for-18 and scoring 22 points for the Bucks, who lost their third straight. Charlie Bell scored 20 points and Ramon Sessions had 18.

Clippers 140, Knicks 135, OT

At New York, Mike Taylor more than doubled his career high with 35 points, Zach Randolph added 33 against his former team, and the Los Angeles Clippers outlasted New York.

Al Thornton scored 21 and Eric Gordon had 19 for the Clippers, who snapped a nine-game road losing streak. Seemingly on the way to being run off the floor while surrendering 44 points in the first quarter, they quickly erased a huge early deficit and finished shooting 58 percent from the field.

And for the second time this season, they benefited from a late technical foul on New York's Al Harrington after a dunk that had given the Knicks a three-point lead in the final half-minute of regulation.

Harrington finished with 38 points for the Knicks, who matched a season high with their sixth straight loss.

Nuggets 101, Hornets 88

At Denver, Carmelo Anthony scored 29 points and Denver snapped New Orleans' three-game winning streak.

Chauncey Billups scored 26 points, hitting four of his five 3-pointers in the second half to help the Nuggets pull away after the game was tied with a little over 7 minutes to go in the third quarter.

Chris Paul had 19 points and 13 assists, and David West scored 18 points for New Orleans, which dropped a game behind Denver in the Western Conference standings.

Mavericks 128, Warriors 106

At Dallas, Dirk Nowitzki and Jason Terry came back from a four-day break as sharp as ever and J.J. Barea led a late surge, helping Dallas cruise past Golden State.

Nowitzki and Terry were a combined 15-of-18 in the first half, keeping Dallas well ahead once the game was just a few minutes old. Golden State managed to get within four points late in the third quarter, but then Barea got rolling.

Nowitzki and Terry each finished with 26 points, and Barea had 20 as the Mavericks shot 58.5 percent and scored their most points of the season.

Anthony Morrow was 10-of-11 for 29 points, his most since November, and Monta Ellis scored 22 for the Warriors.

Suns 118, Jazz 114

At Phoenix, Grant Hill scored 26 points, including a tiebreaking jumper in the lane with 31.5 seconds remaining, to lift Phoenix to its season-high sixth straight victory.

The Suns remained three games behind the Dallas Mavericks in their push for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Western Conference. Each team has 11 games left, with one game between the teams April 5 at Dallas.

The Jazz dropped 1 1/2 games behind the first-place Denver Nuggets in the Northwest Division.

Matt Barnes, with 18 points in the second half, and Jason Richardson each had 21 points for the Suns.

Deron Williams led Utah with 25 points and 10 assists.

Armstrong gets plate, 12 screws in collarbone

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)—His broken collarbone surgically mended, Lance Armstrong is on the clock. The seven-time Tour de France champion will be back on his bike in days even though the bone may take eight to 12 weeks to fully mend. Armstrong must resume training almost immediately if he's to meet his goal of racing in the Giro d'Italia, which begins May 9.

The 37-year-old American cyclist also plans to ride in the Tour de France this July.

Surgeon Doug Elenz inserted a stainless steel plate and 12 screws to stabilize the broken collarbone on Wednesday, two days after Armstrong crashed in the first stage of the Vuelta of Castilla and Leon race in northern Spain.

"Lance is going to be a patient who is going to push the envelope," Elenz said. "This first week we're going to make Lance take it easy ... ask Lance not to do a whole lot."

After taking a few days off, Armstrong will be allowed to ride a stationary bike. Then doctors will monitor his arm strength, range of motion in his shoulder, as well as his pain, to decide what kind of training he can do. Doctors don't want him to strain his upper body in any way for a while.

Just hours after the surgery, Armstrong was posting to his Twitter feed, reassuring fans.

"howdy folks. Made it thru. Took longer than we thought. Playing with my kids right. Making me feel A LOT better," he wrote.

Although doctors initially thought it was a simple fracture, Elenz said X-rays showed it was broken in four pieces.

Rating the three-hour surgery on a scale of one to 10, from easiest to most difficult, he called Armstrong's procedure an 8.

"This was a challenge," Elenz said. "It was a hard case."

Elenz said the 12 screws were more than he might normally use, but he felt they were needed knowing Armstrong's goals. The surgery to stabilize the bone required about a 5-inch incision and the steel plate measures about the same length, said Elenz, who added it's likely doctors will someday remove the plate.

Armstrong returned to elite cycling this year after a 3-year layoff. When he announced his comeback last September, the cancer survivor said his primary goal was to spread his Livestrong message as he raced around the world.

During a conference call Tuesday night, he said he was frustrated the injury came just as he was getting into top shape. He was among the top 10 riders for much of the race Monday before he crashed about 12 miles from the end of the stage.

Now, he's determined to get back to the front.

"I think the Giro is still very doable," Armstrong said. "This is definitely a setback, no doubt. It's the biggest setback I've ever had in my cycling career, so it's a new experience for me."

Goodell wants longer NFL regular season

DANA POINT, Calif. (AP)—More games that count, perhaps as early as August 2011? That's exactly what NFL commissioner Roger Goodell wants.

There are several hurdles before the league can expand its regular season from 16 to 17 or 18 games. Among them is reaching a new collective bargaining agreement with the players' union.

Still, the commissioner hopes to present a proposal to the owners in May after the matter was discussed at length this week at the owners meetings.

"It's possible that we could vote in May, but we want to have core discussions on this," Goodell said Wednesday. "Anytime you have change, there is some reluctance. But it's clear we don't need four preseason games anymore."

Goodell said the league has not seriously discussed the subject with its broadcast partners. He couldn't imagine them not being interested in more meaningful games.

"I think the quality of NFL programming, that every one of our network partners would say, if they have the chance to have more regular-season programming, they'd be interested in it," Goodell said. "A key point is the fans also recognize players they want to see are not in those preseason games; that's why they are not attractive. They want to see those players play."

As for those players and their union, Goodell recognizes an expanded schedule will be part of CBA negotiations. Owners opted out of the current deal last year, and it expires after the 2010 schedule, which would be an uncapped season.

"Under the current agreement, additional regular-season games would not be covered," Goodell said. "I think our most important priority after we get done with our internal analysis is talking to our key partners, and that includes the players. I think we want to make sure that the right dialogue takes place before we make any final votes."

DeMaurice Smith, the NFLPA's incoming executive director, wants any decision that affects the players to happen collaboratively.

"His hope is that the concerns and interests of the players will be seriously considered," said George Atallah, a director at the public relations firm Qorvis Communications and a spokesman for Smith during his transition. "He was elected by the players to be their advocate on such issues and is more than ready to serve them."

Among the issues team owners must discuss is when the regular season would begin; how many bye weeks would be scheduled; how deep into February the playoffs and Super Bowl would go; and when the offseason programs—including the combine and the draft—would be held.

Plus, where would the extra games be played, particularly with 17 of them?

One possibility, an idea Goodell and senior vice president of sales and marketing Mark Waller first mentioned several years ago, would be 17 neutral-site games, including some aboard. That would enable the league to step up its efforts internationally, a particular goal of Goodell's.

"There's been some discussion about that," Goodell said. "That's been one of the appealing features of converting preseason games into regular-season games is it gives you more inventory, more games that you can take to neutral sites, either internationally or domestically. So that is a compelling feature."

Another option would be having one conference play nine home games during a season, and the other conference do so the next year.

Police: Stallworth says warned man before impact

MIAMI (AP)—Cleveland Browns wide receiver Donte Stallworth said he flashed his car's headlights to warn a pedestrian before fatally striking the man in Miami Beach last month, according to a report released by police. The report released Tuesday also said the pedestrian, 59-year-old Mario Reyes, wasn't in a crosswalk when Stallworth's Bentley hit him. According to the report, Stallworth told officers he flashed his lights to try to warn Reyes, a construction crane operator who was rushing to catch a bus after getting off work around 7:15 a.m. March 14. Police said Stallworth was driving about 50 mph in a 40 mph zone. They are investigating whether alcohol played a role in the accident. No charges have been filed against Stallworth pending the outcome of blood tests. A police diagram shows that Reyes was hit in the far left lane of the six-lane MacArthur Causeway—not in a nearby crosswalk. Stallworth stopped a few feet away. Police also released calls from three people who dialed 911 that morning.

Feds: Michael Vick illegally spent pension funds

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—The U.S. Department of Labor filed complaints Wednesday accusing suspended NFL star Michael Vick of illegally spending about $1.3 million in pension plan funds for his own benefit, including paying restitution ordered in his dog-fighting conspiracy case. The department filed the complaints in federal district and bankruptcy courts the same day Vick left a federal lockup in Kansas, apparently bound for Virginia to appear at a bankruptcy hearing next week. Vick was at the Federal Transfer Center in Oklahoma City late Wednesday afternoon. Mark Lichtenstein, one of Vick's bankruptcy attorneys, declined to comment on both the Labor Department allegations and the details of Vick's apparent temporary move to Virginia for the April 2 hearing. The Labor Department said Vick made a series of prohibited transfers from a pension plan sponsored by MV7, a celebrity marketing company owned by the former Atlanta Falcons quarterback. The department alleges that Vick violated his duties as trustee of a pension plan that covered nine current or former MV7 employees.

Calhoun says UConn to probe recruiting allegations

By DAVE COLLINS
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun said he and the university are looking into a Yahoo! Sports report claiming the school broke NCAA rules during the recruitment of former basketball player Nate Miles, but added Miles is not at UConn and his team remains focused on the NCAA tournament.

Yahoo reported Wednesday that Miles, a 6-7 guard from Toledo, Ohio, was given lodging, transportation, meals and representation by sports agent Josh Nochimson, and a UConn assistant coach knew about the relationship between the player and the agent. The story cited interviews, documents obtained under Freedom of Information laws and other sources.

Nochimson, a former student manager for UConn, was considered a representative of UConn's athletic interests by the NCAA and was prohibited from having contact with Miles or giving him anything of value, Yahoo reported.

Records also show that five UConn coaches called Nochimson and text-messed him at least 1,565 times during a nearly two-year period before and after Miles' recruitment in 2006 and early 2007.

Calhoun had 16 of those communications, Yahoo reported.

Miles was expelled from UConn in October without ever playing a game for the Huskies after he was charged with violating a restraining order in a case involving a woman who claimed he assaulted her. He is now attending the College of Southern Idaho and plays for the school's basketball team.

NMITF holds Olympic distance race tomorrow

Northern Mariana Islands Triathlon Federation will hold an Olympic-distance triathlon tomorrow, March 28, at Paupau Beach.

This event will serve as one of the tune-up races for local triathletes who are preparing for the upcoming Saipan XTERRA Championship and Tagaman Triathlon next month.

This will be the third triathlon event to be staged since January following two Enticer races.

Tomorrow's event will consist of a 1,500-meter swim, 40-kilometer bike, and 10-km.

NMITF said that participants who wish to do the half-distance course could only do one lap for each stage.

The swim stage will be held in the Paupau lagoon, while the bike portion will be via the Bird Island Lookout and the Grotto with the run covering the part north of Paupau.

Organizers are still determining the distance for the bike stage.

Registration will start at 6:30am and the race will kick off at 7am.

Mike Johnson of NMITF said they need volunteers to help direct traffic and handle time listing during the event.

"I need people to direct traffic at the road entrance and would like to have a couple of water stops. I would also like to have at least one kayak and timers," said Johnson. (Nazario Rodriguez Jr.) ka, Japan, had eight of its 12 players contributing on offense in the first quarter, which ended with Settsu ahead by 14, 18-4. Glorily Williams and Roxanne Duenas scored two points each for Hopwood.

Duenas went on to finish with 32 big points, but her scoring prowess was overshadowed by Settsu's balance offense. Besides Duenas and Williams, only Victoria Reyes made it into the scoreboard for Hopwood, while Settsu had 11 players piling up points.

The 51-point win put Settsu in the title game against the winner of the MISO All-Stars-Chacha Oceanview Junior High School tiff, which was played yesterday, but results were unavailable at press time.

The title game in the girls' 14-and-under division will be played today at the MHS gym at 10:30am.

In the boys' 16-and-under division, Settsu almost made it to the championship match, as it led in the first half before losing the lead in the last one minute of the fourth quarter.

Tim Sula drilled six of the Dolphins last 10 points to allow MHS to steal the win.

Thirty-six students completed the five-weekend swim lessons that Tsunami Swimming Center Saipan and the American Red Cross-CNMI Chapter conducted at the Kan Pacific Swimming Pool in Marpi.

The first session started on Feb. 14, while the last four took place on Feb. 21, Feb. 28, March 14, and March 21.

Tsunami Saipan Senior Team members Rezne Wong, Cooper Graf, Shin and Kensuke Kimura, Kai Staal, Marystar Welch, and Sarah Johnson shared their expertise on water safety and the basic strokes in swimming to 36 participants. Other Tsunami swimmers who helped in the swim lessons were Kaisei Toda, Kaitao Yanai, Thea Minor, and Ashley Welch, and coaches Hiro Kimura, Val Welch, and Stan Good.

Tsunami Saipan's senior swimmers are certified as Red Cross water safety instructors and Red Cross life guards, and they conducted the five Saturday sessions in accordance with the American Red Cross Water Safety Program.

The course is ideal for parents, youth in grades 4 to 12, youth organizations, and campers, who participate in water-related activities. Nearly two million people learn to swim each year through the program.

Tamiko Winkfield, and Saipan

Swim Club coach Michael Villagomez and daughter Keanna teamed up with Tsunami Saipan swimmers and coaches in holding beginners and adults lessons to participants.

"Special thanks go to Mike and his daughter Keanna, and Tami Winkfield for their assistance in conducting the beginners group and adults lessons.

They are perennial favorites of the community for teaching swim lessons to the youngest students and adults, alike," said Good, adding that they had a student as young as five years old.

Good said they will be holding another series of swim lessons this summer with the date and venue to be announced later.

Besides teaching kids and adults the basics of swimming, Tsunami Saipan is conducting swim lessons to bring their swimmers closer to the community, especially to aspiring kid swimmers.

The club is also using the swim lessons to raise funds for the purchase of equipment, for sending Tsunami Saipan swimmers to off-island competitions, and for monthly fees at the Kan Pacific Swimming Pool.

Baseball bizarro

By BOB COLDEEN
SPECIAL TO THE SAIPAN TRIBUNE

To my way of thinking, baseball is based on a set of completely logical rules. Nonetheless, some things don't add up, don't seem square or level. Call them mental screwballs.

A baseball catcher is the only player in sports who is positioned out of bounds and squats.

A golf ball is harder than a baseball. Then why is baseball called hardball? Shouldn't golf be called hardball?

The foul pole is always placed in fair territory. Why isn't it called a fair pole? Then why not place the foul pole in foul territory and if the ball hits it, then it is a foul ball?

A right handed batter stands in the left side of the batters box and a left handed batter stands in the right side of the batters box. Why is there no place for an even handed person, such as me?

Ground rules are a set of rules that apply specifically to a ball field that are not in the official playing rules e.g. a ball that hits a roof beam at Tropicana Field. A fair ball that bounces over the fence is commonly called a ground-rule double. But that's not in the ground rules; it's in the official rules where it is simply called a two-base hit. Personally, I prefer the way "ground-rule" rolls off the tongue. A ground-rule double sounds as if it was struck harder than a two-base hit.

In all my years of announcing games, I cannot recall ever saying ground-rule triple. It's possible of course. That would happen when a player throws his glove or cap at a ball and touches it. Naturally you don't see that in professional games. It's rare even in amateur play.

The first time I saw that on Saipan was at Mt. Carmel ballfield in a 1980's softball game. The only other time was at Palacios Field during a youth baseball game. That's twice that I remember which spans three decades and a ton of games. But in neither case did the fielder successfully hit the ball. Which renders moot the question, "if the glove had touched the ball, would the umpires have called a three-base hit or ground rule triple?"

As a kid growing up practicing baseball practically every day, even if we only had a few boys, I remember throwing the glove and hitting the ball was quite an admirable skill, an accomplishment, tough to do. Of course that was never in real games, just kids fooling around, and usually too at the end of a long workout when there was no fence behind you and no other kids to help out and if the ball got by you, that meant a long run.

I got to be pretty good at stopping the ball by throwing my glove at it. Which got me to thinking—what's so bad about that? It's an added athletic skill and another dimension to the game. At night I lay sleepless pondering questions like, "would my ability to throw my glove at the ball overcome my other deficiencies to enable me to play professional baseball? Did my chance at the bigs fail because somebody forgot to put that in the rules? Why is baseball the only game where the manager and coaches wear player uniforms, as if some fat old bald 60-year-olds are going to get on the playing field?"

I probably won't sleep again tonight.
